Pilot group cool to French in air

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association (CALPA) has reacted coolly to the news that air traffic control systems in Quebec's major airports will be made completely bilingual by early next year.

And the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association — the group that went on strike over the issue in 1976 and insisted a royal commission be set up to study the matter in detail — has reluctantly accepted what amounts to a major defeat.

Meanwhile, Russ Beach, president of the Canadian Owners and Pilots Association, which represents small, private aircraft owners, said he was "dumbfounded" by the bilingual air traffic control decision.

Federal Transport Minister Don Mazankowski announced Tuesday a team had already been created to implement the unanimous recommendations of a commission of inquiry which urged bilingual instrument and visual flight rules rules for Quebec's main airports, including Dorval and Mirabel, by early 1980.

CALPA president Roland Cook made it clear his association has misgivings:

"We have reservations as to whether the theoretical approach of the report and simulation studies will be reflected in real world implementation."

Cook said, however, that CALPA's input and participation with the three-man commission over the past three years "have had positive effects in that any implementation is likely to be a great deal better considered than it might otherwise have been."

W. R. Robertson, president of the air controllers' association, told a press conference today he respected the royal commission's integrity, but seriously questioned its findings:

"Our contention that the introduction of a second language would make the aviation environment less safe has not changed.

"Despite our convictions, but because we believe we have had a fair hearing, we reluctantly accept the unanimous decision of the commission . . ."

Mazankowski made public the royal commission report and his decision after receiving the three-member commission's findings early last week.

The swift government action represents a clear victory for francophone air traffic controllers who split with their English-speaking counterparts over the issue in 1976. The Liberal cabinet was also bitterly divided and Senator Jean Marchand, a

Dollar exchange

U.S. dollar at banks this morning bought $1.1660 Canadian, according to the Greater Victoria Information Centre.

By NORMAN GIDNEY

The Insurance Corporation of B.C.'s FAIR auto insurance rates are unfair, spokesman for the private insurance industry said after getting a look at Fundamental Auto Insurance Rating.

But members of the New Democratic Party opposition and the B.C. Automobile Association welcomed the new non-discriminatory rate system which will be phased in over the next five years.

"The poor old ladies are going to be hit worst — the ones who are cautious and don't drive sports cars," said Brian Stanhope, manager of the Insurance Bureau of Canada office in Vancouver.

"It puts the rate-making business back 40 or 50 years," said Larry Shane of Gardiner Agencies in Victoria, adding it scraps a fairly-sophisticated system of assigning risks which has grown up over the years due to public demand.

After FAIR is in place, there will be only three categories for determining the rates for accident-free drivers — whether the car is used for pleasure only, to and from work or for business purposes.

"It's going to cost us," Shane added, meaning Victorians who now have the lowest rates in the province, only 64 per cent of what Vancouverites pay at the top of the scale.

"I don't think it's going to be a very popular decision in Victoria."

BCAA president Harold Crompton said he is pleased with the new program, especially the rate reductions for young drivers.

"They now have an incentive to avoid accidents and will not be penalized merely for youthfulness. Now the costs of insurance will be placed where they should be — in the pockets of those who cause accidents."

MLA Ernie Hall, a member of the NDP government which established ICBC and a former auto insurance agent, said FAIR puts the province back to where it was at the end of 1975.

"We're seeing the end to the very high discriminatory rates that were introduced in 1976 against young people and we're seeing a continuation of the removal of territorial discrimination that started off in 1973 . . . so I welcome it from that point of view."

But he also believes FAIR could lead to tangles of litigation between drivers, since the driver blamed for an expensive accident faces an extra $300 bill on his auto insurance.

"It will be a simpler, more

Adulteress executed, murderer goes free

TEHRAN (UPI) — A revolutionary firing squad today executed a woman accused of adultery but a convicted murderer walked out of court a free man because the father of his victim forgave him.

Nargis Jabbaris was executed in the northeastern resort of Sari on the charge of adultery, Pars news agency reported. She was the 486th person executed since the Islamic regime took power in February.

The woman's accused lover, Haji Baba Sabeqi, received 100 lashes as his punishment. The news agency said the court did not sentence him to death because of his "ignorance" and because he was a bachelor.

In Shiraz, Iran's southern "City of Roses," former gendarmerie master sergeant Evaz Mehravar was freed by the judge in an emotional scene as the father of Nazer Rezazadeh forgave him for shooting his son to death, a newspaper report said today. No details of the killing were given.

Mehravar was under sentence of death by firing squad but left the courtroom a free man.

Under Islamic law a criminal in not liable for punishment by authorities if pardoned by relatives of the victim, even in cases of premeditated murder.

One-man frogman campaign clicks

By PHILIP HAGER
Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — It began on the Fourth of July, when Mitch Egan, a 37-year-old restaurant consultant, strode into San Francisco International Airport and began handing out clickers — the tiny noisemakers favored by children at Halloween, birthdays and other celebrations.

Egan was declaring a small and lonely war against religious solicitors, the persistent, indefatigable salesmen for assorted causes he and other travellers encounter so often in airports.

"On my last trip to L.A., I'd been solicited three times between the plane and the car rental booth," he recalled. "I thought, 'What is this?' They say they have a right to solicit. But I say I've got a right not to be solicited. So I decided to do something about it."

What Egan did was to launch a one-man tour of big city airports, handing out clickers by the thousands in the name of the Fellowship to Resist Organized Groups Involved in Exploitation (FROGIE).

The idea, he tells often delighted travellers, is to use the clicker to ward off aggressive solicitors.

"Saying 'no' doesn't work and getting physical can get you in jail," Egan explained. "Using this clicker really works. You can't talk to somebody with a clicker going off in your face...We are going to get these people out of airports."

Egan, who lives in Burlingame, about 12 miles south of San Francisco, has enjoyed some early — if temporary — success in his battle against religious sects. His act recently enlivened by a frog costume, Egan said he has handed out 75,000 clickers he bought with his own money for about 7 cents apiece. Travel expenses have put another big dent in his wallet.

At San Francisco airport, solicitors have disappeared for the moment in the wake of the Egan frog assault. But at Denver — one of a number of stops on an itinerary that stretches from Seattle to Chicago to Fort Lauderdale to San Diego — the solicitors have returned despite Egan's temporary triumph.

"When he was here the place sounded like a swamp full of crickets," recalled Robert Stapp, public affairs manager for Denver's Stapleton International Airport.

"But now the solicitors are right back at the same old place. We can't throw 'em out. We've been to court three or four times but that doesn't work. They're a real nuisance."

"His clicking campaign is having no effect on us," said Bharata Dasa, director of public and legal affairs for the Hare Krishna sect in nearby Berkeley. "When people at airports ask us what he's doing, we just say he's 'clicking for Krishna.'"

A number of persons have sent small contributions ($5, $1, 25 cents), including one contributor who asked, should FROGIE ever issue formal memberships, that she be given the membership number of 007.

There was no sign of a letup in the clicker campaign here last week as Egan, clad in his green and gold frog costume, handed out the devices to a steady stream of children, airport employees and travellers. In the momentary quiet of the morning, the tiny noisemaker could be heard throughout the terminal — click-click, click-click, click-click.

All of this is music to the ears of the chain-smoking, New York-born Egan. During his small war, he has heard endless stories about religious solicitors — how they use flattery, deceit and intimidation against unwary travellers.

"I've heard everything, even how they will put their foot in front of a wheelchair while they try to get a donation out of somebody," Egan said.

"Well, I started this thing and I guess I'll have to finish it.

Final farewell to Dief

Times News Services

SASKATOON — John George Diefenbaker was buried today on a bluff overlooking the South Saskatchewan River before hundreds of the "fellow Canadians" who helped make him Canada's 15th prime minister and a legend that often was larger than life.

"His life was Canada," said Prime Minister Joe Clark in a eulogy to the man who led the country from 1957 to 1963.

"We are not here to pass judgment on John Diefenbaker," Clark said.

"We are here to celebrate the frontier strength and spirit of an indominable man, born to a minority group, raised in a minority region, leader of a minority party, who went on to change the very nature of his country . . . he leaves his country better, broader, prouder than he found it."

He was buried beside his second wife, Olive — her body was moved here from Ottawa — on a knoll to the west of the Diefenbaker Memorial Centre at the University of Saskatchewan.

As his casket was lowered, a bugler pierced the prairie hush with The Last Post, a piper followed with Lament and military guns cracked out a 19-gun salute.

Meanwhile, Diefenbaker's legal representatives said they would reveal details of his will and a controversial retirement trust fund later this week. (See also story on page 19).

On its arrival here, the first person to view the coffin was Gordon Churchill, of Victoria, a defence minister in Diefenbaker's last government and one of the prairie populist's closest friends.

Port Angeles port pushed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The U.S. energy department has recommended construction of the all-American Northern Tier oil pipeline over rival Canadian plans to carry surplus Alaskan oil to the U.S. Midwest, according to the Vancouver Sun.

The Northern Tier proposal involves tankers carrying oil down the coast to Port Angeles, where it would be shipped by pipeline across northern U.S. states.

The evening newspaper said in a story today that the information is contained in a special memorandum from former U.S. energy secretary James Schlesinger to Cecil Andrus, secretary of the interior.

Schlesinger's recommendation is among several that the U.S. department of the interior is collecting before advising Carter of its final recommendations for an Alaskan pipeline.

Too wet even for ducks

RICHMOND — Rainy weather is normally considered lovely for ducks but Richmond RCMP say Tuesday night was an exception.

In a press release, the Mounties said an officer on patrol reported the rain and mist in the low-lying municipality forced him to drive with his side window open so he could see where he was going.

So bad was visibility, the officer reported, that a low-flying duck flew through the window and landed on the seat beside him.

Police said the case was quacked by shooing the duck from the patrol car.

Hydro, ferry strike threats

The possibility of a strike is dogging two major B.C. crown corporations — B.C. Hydro and the B.C. Ferry Corp.

The ferry workers cleared the way for a strike Tuesday when they served 72-hour strike notice.

However, union president Shirley Mathieson said efforts will be made at today's meeting with mediator Fred Geddes to find a way of avoiding such action.

She said any action by the 2,600 ferry workers will take the form of rotating strikes, shutting down one terminal at a time.

However, even that action could severely disrupt late summer ferry service already strained by the heavy tourist traffic and the loss two weeks ago of the Queen of Alberni.

The ferry ran aground in Active Pass and may be out for as much as two months.

Meanwhile,. B.C. Hydro faces labor problems on two fronts, from 3,700 clerical, office and related employees as well as the corporation's electrical workers.

Shop stewards for the members of the Office and Technical Employees Union are to meet tonight to lay plans for what they called "selective job action."

A union spokesman said the employees won't conduct a wholesale strike because they don't want to inconvenience the public.

The union has been in a legal strike position since mediator Jack Chapelas withdrew from the contract dispute last week.

Hydro's 3,200 electrical workers have voted 93 per cent in favor of striking to back their contract demands.

However, Art O'Keeffe, business agent for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 258, said no action will be taken until the union meets again with Hydro.

"The resounding strike mandate answers attempts by B.C. Hydro to erode long established conditions in the agreement," O'Keeffe said.

"B.C. Hydro and union relations are at an all-time low — the worst in 75 years."

B.C. ferry officials have said a major issue delaying settlement of a new contract is the cost of sick leave. Under the old contract, employees were allowed six days of sick leave at full salary.

A management letter to employees says records indicate the number of sick days taken by employees in the eight months since the plan took effect has increased rapidly and an alternative is needed to curtail the expense.

10 more N.Y. bank holdups

NEW YORK (AP) — Ten more New York banks have been hit by armed robbers and gunmen pulled off a $2 million heist while police were declaring war against the daring daylight raids with the formation of a 30-man shotgun squad.

Within four hours Tuesday, robbers attempted to hold up 10 banks in Manhattan, the Bronx and Queens, raising to 120 the number of bank jobs in the city since Aug. 1. The old August record was 84 in 1977.

In another holdup, three ski-mask hooded gunmen using a fish-delivery truck scooped up money bags being loaded into a Brink's armored truck at the headquarters of the Chase Manhattan Bank in the city's financial district.

They took two hostages, a Brink's security guard and a restaurant employee, who later were released unharmed near the Brooklyn Bridge.

Tuesday's bank robbery total was three short of the city record for robberies in one day — 13, set July 27. Authorities say there have been 575 bank robberies in New York so far this year.

"There is a sense on the street that it's open season on banks; we have to turn that around," said Police Commissioner Robert McGuire.

A police department spokesman said a special shotgun squad probably will be on the streets in about two weeks.

McGuire said the "apprehension" squad will consist of shotgun-armed detectives riding in unmarked vans. They will anticipate likely targets in hopes of stopping robberies in progress.

A 23-year-old teller at a European American Bank was killed Monday in a holdup, and the bank Tuesday offered a $25,000 reward for information leading to an arrest.

Authorities blame the bank robberies on a variety of factors, including publicity, inflation and what McGuire labelled "cafeteria-style" banking — no bars in front of bank tellers and often no armed guard in the bank.

Steel prices up 3 to 7%

TORONTO (CP) — Hit by continuing higher costs, Canada's two major steel companies increased prices Tuesday, effective Oct. 1.

The increases will affect nearly every sector of Canadian industry, from steel fabricators to agricultural implement makers to automotive parts.

They ranged from three to seven per cent.

Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. (Stelco) raised the price for hot formed hollow structural sections an average of $29.77 a net ton, or seven per cent. Cold formed hollow structural sections go up by $26, or 6.2 per cent.

Stelco's tin mill products will rise $32.45 a net ton, or 5.9 per cent. As well, galvanized coated coils will jump by $20.50 a ton or 4.6 per cent.

Dominion Foundries and Steel Ltd. (Dofasco) announced the price for skelp and hot rolled steel will rise an average of $17.50 a net ton, or 5.5 per cent.

Attacks renewed

SALISBURY (Reuter) — Zimbabwe Rhodesian planes attacked a Patriotic Front guerrilla base in neighboring Zambia today, a military headquarters communique said.

The attack was on a base at Mulungushi and all aircraft returned safely, it said.

Today's attack was the first cross-border raid reported by the military since the latest British proposals for a Zimbabwe Rhodesia settlement were approved by Commonwealth leaders in Lusaka on Aug. 5.

Guerrilla bases at Mulungushi, about 115 kilometres northeast of Lusaka, were attacked twice by Zimbabwe Rhodesia in April.

Guerrillas of Joshua Nkomo's faction of the Patriotic Front were the targets of today's attack, the military communique said.

Zimbabwe Rhodesian forces have also crossed into Mozambique to strike at the Zimbabwe African National Liberation Army of Robert Mugabe, Nkomo's co-leader in the Patriotic Front.

. . . who is this masked man?

A scantily-clad tribesman who climbed 5,700-metre Mount Kenya barefoot to pray to a mountain god has declined to be rescued by an eight-member team sent to help him. "He shouted 'You are not my brothers' and ran away across the rocks when the team sighted him," mountain ranger Phil Snyder said today. Snyder dispatched the rescue team because he believed it impossible to descend from Mount Kenya, Africa's second-highest peak, without sophisticated mountaineering equipment. But when the would-be rescuers saw the man Tuesday he was halfway down the snowcapped mountain and was below the difficult stretch, Snyder said today.

Seventeen-year-old Katherine Kokoszka, of Mission, was crowned Miss PNE Tuesday. About 8,000 people saw the five-foot, four-inch tall brunette chosen from among 40 contestants.

Soviet officials told a U.S. congressional delegation Tuesday that Anatoly Shcharansky is in excellent health, Jewish sources in Moscow reported today. But the mother of the imprisoned Jewish dissident told the visitors that her son is having unbearable headaches and was "skin and bones" when she saw him two weeks ago.

Los Angeles divorce lawyer Marvin Mitchelson admits he's personally no great shakes as a husband, even though he's been married to his wife for nearly two decades. But in a Cosmopolitan magazine interview he says he dreads the very thought of divorce. Says Mitchelson: "Do you know how many lawyers in this town would like to get their hands on that case?"

Actor Clayton Moore, who battled for justice as television's Lone Ranger, now is fighting for the right to appear in public as the famed masked man he portrayed. "When I was a kid, I wanted to be two things — a policeman or a cowboy," the actor recalled. "I was lucky because I got to be a cowboy." But last week, in Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Jerry Pacht temporarily barred Moore from making public appearances as The Lone Ranger. The company that owns the rights to the character claims Moore is too old. Clayton refuses to reveal his age, but he has been reported to be between 65 and 70. "Believe me," said the man who made the mysterious champion of justice famous, "I am quite hurt."

And finally, those who think Broadway stars have a permanent address on Easy Street might look to Danny Aiello and reconsider. He's the star of Knockout — a play about prize fighters — and every night he and co-star Edward O'Neill have to slug it out in a vicious stage brawl. All the blood they wear isn't makeup. Says Aiello, holding thumb and forefinger a quarter-inch apart, "We miss each other about that far, and sometimes we don't miss. He recently knocked a tooth out for me and the other night, I knocked him unconscious. We're both heavyweights and it's hell. I don't know how much longer I can take this."

Still a question mark

It may be that in 1982, or 1984, or whenever ICBC's new FAIR program is fully operational, no accident-free B.C. driver will have paid an extra dollar in premiums as a result of the program.

It is a certainty, however, that the program is so complicated and so full of loopholes that nobody will be able to say for sure whether he (or more likely she, since females now benefit from low actuarial rates) has paid extra or not.

Robbie Sherrell, the ICBC president who announced the program on Tuesday, has given the corporation so many ways out of explaining premium increases that future ICBC spokesmen would have to be idiots if they couldn't find one to use in defence of FAIR.

As the program is implemented, Sherrell said, every good driver in B.C. will pay the same rate for the compulsory third-party coverage, a rate that is about the same as that now paid by drivers receiving a three-year safe driver's discount. But, he added hastily, that doesn't take into account any increases that may result from inflation, increased numbers of accidents in the province, or higher payments for damage or personal injury.

There's Sherrell's loophole in a nutshell. Any increase in premiums can be attributed, probably quite truthfully, to inflation, or more accidents, or higher claims. It may turn out that a big part of the increase in accidents was caused by young male drivers. Under the old system, they would then have ended up paying for those accidents, and everyone else's premiums would not have risen so fast. But that won't matter: the direct cause of the premium increases was the number of accidents, not the new system.

Indeed, it may be argued that every B.C. driver — the good, the bad, the old, the young — has already paid a fair chunk of money to help bring in the FAIR program.

The money to implement the program in the first place, estimated at $55 million, has come from an ICBC fund named the "rate stabilization fund." The interesting thing about this fund is that it didn't exactly become a household word until the Social Credit government decided to drop differential rates in auto insurance. In fact, hardly anyone had heard of it.

In essence, however, the rate stabilization fund comes from profits that ICBC has built up during the past couple of the years — profits that came from the premiums paid by each and every driver in B.C. ICBC now has about $60 million in the fund. With about 1.5 million drivers in the province, each of them could have saved about $40 over the past couple of the years, had ICBC not been establishing the fund.

In the long-term, ICBC plans to cover its costs by charging drivers who are at fault in accidents an extra premium — $100 a year for three years for each year in which a claim of more than $100 is made. An extra $20 a year will be charged if a driver also claims on his collision insurance.

It is not possible to tell whether this system is actuarially sound. The extra charges don't sound large enough to make up for the 25 and 30 per cent discounts being given to hundreds of thousands of young drivers.

The principle of eliminating insurance discrimination remains philosophically attractive. The practical implementation of the plan, without unfairly hurting other safe drivers, remains a question mark.

Out of control

Government in India is democracy out of control. Numerous political parties unable to consolidate have forced the resignation of Prime Minister Charan Singh, only 24 days after he took office.

Now Singh has been asked to stay in office until a general election can be held. It's been predicted that former prime minister Indira Gandhi stands a good chance of being re-elected. Whatever happens, the next government's length of tenure is far from secure.

A week before his resignation, Singh expressed his government's determination to check rising prices, reduce unemployment and narrow the gap between rich and poor. He also noted feelings of insecurity among the weaker sections of society had to be removed. A government, he said, would be unfit to continue if it did not pay attention to these issues.

Those are certainly worthwhile aims. But after only 24 days in office it is clear the Singh government had little hope of even starting to deal with the issues.

It can only be concluded that he wasn't defeated by an obvious inability to deal with the country's massive problems. Rather, his defeat came as a result of the democratic chaos caused by a large number of political parties fighting among themselves while jockeying for power.

If nothing else India's politics stand as a tribute to the parliamentary democracies with fewer political parties.

Catch-22 for catching leaks

WASHINGTON — One day recently, Robert L. Keuch, a U.S. justice department expert on intelligence matters, started an investigation of a leak about a leak investigation. He's not holding his breath waiting to find the culprit because he knows leakers are seldom caught and even less often punished.

But his action was understandable to a lot of frustrated keepers of the nation's secrets who tire of reading them in the morning papers. For a story saying that the government has begun a criminal investigation about a leak of classified information tends to confirm the accuracy of the original leak.

Last month, for instance, the New York Times reported that the justice department had been asked by Admiral Stansfield Turner, the director of the Central Intelligence Agency, to find who leaked a story that the United States planned to use a listening post in Norway to help verify Soviet compliance with the new strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II).

Classified reports

This month, the justice department was called on again, this time to find out who leaked a classified Senate report about the activities of agents from friendly foreign powers in this country to columnist Jack Anderson and the Washington Post.

Leakers are as much a part of Washington as cherry blossoms and the Redskins, and newspaper reporters await them with ready typewriters.

It's when the leaks are of classified material that members of the intelligence community join the fray. But their anger and pursuit are almost always choked off by their own special Catch-22: even if the leaker is caught, the aggrieved agency doesn't want to declassify the information for a trial.

In addition, a 1971 CIA study found the leaker is often a "high administration official" feeding the information to a reporter to push his policy objective.

Justice department and FBI officials often feel they're on fools' errands chasing leaks. Access to the document may be so broad it's practically impossible to pinpoint the leak source. Then there's the agency's understandable reluctance to declassify.

And if all the thresholds are passed, the only tool for prosecution is the same espionage statute used to punish spies who sell secrets to hostile governments.

Because of these kinds of problems, Philip B. Heymann, head of the criminal division at the justice department, is considering proposing changes in the law to allow lesser penalties for those who leak to reporters than for those who pass secrets to foreign powers.

In an interview last week, Heymann emphasized that his idea is very tentative. "We certainly need to have enough information in the public domain to allow for a healthy debate of important foreign policy issues," he said. "But you can't open your files to other countries. You have to have national secrets."

Heymann said he recognizes that someone who leaks information to a reporter certainly doesn't have the same harmful intent as an enemy spy.

Keuch pointed out that the possible harm to the national defense may be just as great, though. He noted that a navy man is serving up to 25 years in prison for selling to a foreign power some radar manuals that probably are far less damaging than the Norway disclosure.

About 12 to 15 leak investigations are referred to the justice department each year, Keuch said. But less than one-third ever lead to an FBI field check becuse the intelligence agencies say distribution was too broad to trace the leak or declassification would be too harmful.

Price tag high

Damage from leaks similar to those surrounding the debate on SALT II is likely to escalate in the future because of the increasing sophistication of U.S. weapons and surveillance systems in general, Keuch estimates. "The price tag on a national security leak is a lot higher than it was 15 years ago," he said.

But the likelihood of finding the leaker isn't getting any greater, justice department and FBI officials acknowledge. The only leak prosecution in memory was of Daniel Ellsberg, who gave the Pentagon Papers on the Vietnam war to the New York Times and the Washington Post.

He was charged under the espionage statutes, but the case was thrown out by the judge because of revelations about illegal wiretaps by the White House.

The justice department and the FBI are now going through the painstaking business of checking on the Norway and foreign agent leaks.

NICHOLAS GAGE

ATHENS — While the rest of Europe is experiencing a soaring crime rate, Greece is enjoying domestic tranquillity and freedom from violence.

Prime Minister Constantine Caramanlis strolls from his home to work nearly every day, stopping to receive the salutations of his constituents. When youths on a motorbike snatch an elderly woman's purse, it is considered worth an article in the newspapers. After dark the sound of footsteps on a lonely street causes no shudders of apprehension. Most families like to promenade at night, and even small children are out until nearly midnight with their parents, greeting neighbors, stopping at cafes and enjoying the warm weather.

Greece has one of the lowest rates of violent crime in the world and the lowest in Europe. The rate for murders last year was 1.3 per 100,000, compared with 8.8 in the United States and 3.8 in Italy. In Turkey last year there were more than 1,499 political assassinations alone, while of the 117 homicides in Greece only one was classed as a political killing.

Informal controls

The reason for the dramatically low crime rate does not seem to be tough treatment of wrongdoers by either judges or prison officials, although from 1967 to 1974, when the military held power, there were reports of brutality.

"Although capital punishment exists on the books, there has not been a single execution in eight years," said Nicholas Androulakis, professor of criminal law at Athens University. "Long prison terms are not frequent and sentences under one year in length can be bought off for $10 a day. In the prisons inmates are not expected to work, and those that do have each workday counted as two."

The rate of violent crimes has remained fairly consistent except for a period in 1968, when it was even lower. "For about a year everyone apparently held back out of fear of the dictatorship, but by 1969 the rate of convictions had gone back to normal levels," said Mrs. C.D. Spinellis, a lecturer on criminology at the University of Athens law school who has made a special study of fluctuations in crime rates.

She and Androulakis concur in attributing the low rate to strong family and community pressures. "Greece remains a traditional society, where family and community ties are still very strong," Mrs. Spinellis said. "There is little anonymity here. When you know your neighbor you don't harm him because you need him. Studies in criminality show that informal controls, such as the family and the community, are the most effective controls."

Alexander Lykourezos, a criminal lawyer, recalled that almost every one of his clients who was involved in a felony was more concerned about his family's reaction to his crime than about the judge's reaction. "The usual family response," he said, "is, 'How could you bring such shame on the family?' — not, 'Why did you do it?' or 'How have we failed you?' A response like that from people you care about is the most effective deterrent there is."

Crime statistics bear out this theory. "The incidence of those crimes condemned by the community — rape, murder, robbery — are very low in Greece, but those crimes not popularly considered reprehensible, like white-collar crime and tax evasion, which is endemic here, are quite high," Androulakis explained.

Even with those crimes included the number of arrests in 1977 was 223,795, or 2,486 per 100,000, as against an American rate in that year of 5,055 per 100,000.

Little organization

Mrs. Spinellis, who received a doctorate in comparative law from the University of Chicago Law School, said there was little organized crime to carry out large-scale operations. The few incidents of criminals working in tandem, she added, have involved the selling of narcotics and the stealing and smuggling of antiquities.

Although family and community strictures may be keeping Greece among the more trouble-free nations, the flood of people moving from small villages into the urban centers is creating anonymity, which is slowly undermining those strictures.

According to Mrs. Spinellis, juvenile delinquency and narcotics arrests are slowly increasing. Although narcotics arrests were a comparatively low 223 last year, they represented a 25 percent rise from 1977. "We're fortunate right now, but we're being extensively urbanized and I'm afraid our low crime rate won't last long," she said.

Woodstock

I have just read the reprint from the Los Angeles Times Woodstock: When the kids lost their innocence — by Alan Parachin, appearing on page five, Aug. 13. Apparently in the estimation of many, Woodstock symbolized something apocalyptic, but which has now become just another fallen emblem of the consciousness revolution that failed to deliver the goods: innocence, harmony, wholeness. History has moved on, and Haight Ashbury, the diggers, love-ins, and such communal gatherings as Woodstock have all been appropriated by the more cynical, prosaic, desacralizing forces of civilization.

Not so. This assessment ignores the more subtle forces which precipitated the spiritualizing of youth in the sixties, and fails to perceive how those same forces are now manifesting in less visible but still significant forms.

Let us suppose that Western Man became so linear and ego-centred in his thinking and perception, that Nature — or That which has composed this universe — felt it necessary to explode his boundaries to remind him of the wholeness of his being; thus the psychedelic alchemy of "turning on", the "trip" to ego-death, the flower power of Buddhahood. Once, however, these substances (LSD especially) had revealed their power to transmute consciousness, then it was up to these instant visionaries to alter their lives, to take the necessary steps of discipline and devotion in order to earn the bliss of their divine hallucinations. Few really did this, and Nature soon withdrew her grace, and what was before a wave of innocence and reformation soon became sullied, stale, and anti-evolutionary. Disillusioned, and lacking the intuition of their real destiny, the hippies soon were absorbed into the "straightness" which they had scorned, to be replaced by a less intelligent counter-culture, imitative but never as genuinely graced as the first vanguard.

The real seekers, however — those who were evolved enough in their feeling and perceptions to know the revolution was a totally inner one, a revolution that could only be achieved within the traditions of Western culture — moved on with Nature, combining the most efficient technologies of the East — meditation — along with the richest poetry of the West.

For these former hippies, the magic has not died nor the idealism, and what Woodstock represents is the artificial paradise momentarily created by Nature to awaken man to the infinite possibilities of his being — only, however, to be realized permanently in the sustained revolution of his intensity and vulnerability; then eventually he would from within himself produce the chemicals of his own final ecstasy and fulfillment. Thus both Buddha and Faust would meet in one heart. — Robin Carlsen, 1225 Sunnyside Avenue.

What's new?

I wonder if anyone out there is as confused about general social trends as I am? As an avid student of history and a citizen conscious of my own times, I seem to be unable to decide what it is my era will be remembered for.

Everywhere I go, everything that I do and see is reminiscent of another decade. It is with great caution that I ask anyone these days, "what's new?"

Beginning with the clothes people wear, right down to their shoes, the "in" thing is something that's been around before. Skirts are straight and boasting slits up the sides, backs and fronts, (not all at the same time). Blouses "look" silky, everything is baggy except for the bottoms of pant legs and there seem to be lots of demure pin-tucs on tops. Collars are rounded, rolled or non-existent. Shoes now have dull, rounded toes, and underwear (for women at least), has gone back to being satiny with lots of synthetic lace and sexy peek-a-boos. One look at the Vogue woman of 1979 reveals a conglomeration of fads spanning the 1930s, 1940s and the 1950s. Even the latest hair-do (for women) is a close likeness to the kind worn by great femme fatales of bygone years: bobbed perms, long slinky, sidesweeps, upsweeps and, yes, cleansweeps as they used to be referred to.

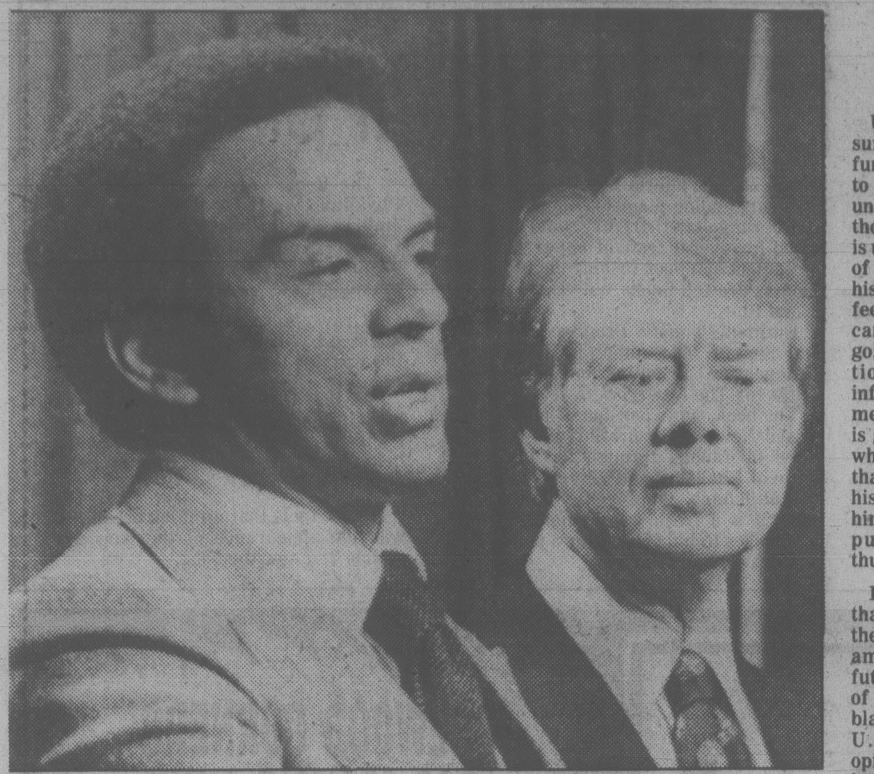
Try going to the "in" place for dinner and dancing. Dinners haven't changed much, but dancing has reverted back to a lot of "touching" — one of the greatest losses to the kind of dancing that was popular in the 1960s and early 1970s. Other forms of entertainment extol the virtues (or maybe the oddities) of the 1940s and '50s. Movies such as Same Time Next Year, and Superman; TV series like Laverne and Shirley or Happy Days are all mish-mash of the 1950s and '60s. Writing has drawn us backwards too. The big sellers are Studs Lonnigan, The Immigrants, You Can Never Go Home Again, and, Once An Eagle, indicating an avid interest in our recent past. Why?

Could it be that we have completed a whole cycle that complements the ups and downs of world economics which in turn reflects/influences politics? I mean to suggest that in our history whenever things turn sour social trends adopt a mood of conservatism. Hemlines drop, suits get baggy, hair goes shorter as if to accompany the decline of dollars and intellectual leadership.

So-called leaders of the arts, the economy, governments and philosophy have no stature compared to those of the past, and so, societies all over take a step backwards. We feel insecure with no one to turn to, so what happens? We pay more lip-service to old values but carry on in our "modern" way. Where are we going, what are we doing, again we face the question, What's New? — Lori Burns, 109-660 Niagara Street.

Diplomacy, morality don't mix

HENRY FAIRLIE
The Washington Post



Young and Carter . . . ambassadors politicized

Until last Wednesday I assumed that it is one of the functions of an ambassador to have unofficial, and even unauthorized meetings with those whom his government is unable to meet for reasons of protocol; that it is one of his functions to reach and feel where his government cannot officially be seen to go; that it is one of his functions to be a supplier of information to his government about everything that is going on in the country in which he is stationed; and that if he is caught in the act, his government will assist him to dissemble, and not publicly put him to the thumbscrew.

It is important to be clear that I am writing only about the function of diplomacy. I am not writing about the future of Israel, or the rights of the Palestinians, or the blacks and the Jews in the U.S. I may have definite opinions about all of those, but they are not here my subject. I am concerned with the position and the role of the ambassador.

The classic work on diplomatic practice was written by Sir Ernest Satow, a scholar-diplomat of the last century, after his retirement in 1905, and its fifth and fully revised edition has just appeared. It now has to have elaborate chapters on subjects like "Kidnapping of Diplomats." This up-to-date edition begins by quoting the definition of "diplomacy" in the Oxford English Dictionary. Diplomacy is (i) "the management of international relations by negotiation." But then it is (ii) "the method by which these relations are adjusted by ambassadors and envoys." We are not surprised to read that; it is what most of us mean by the word.

It is true that Satow goes on to say that, "strictly speaking, the head of the foreign department is also a diplomatist," but he goes on to belie this, as one would expect, by writing almost entirely about the "diplomatic agents": ambassadors, legates and nuncios, envoys, internuncios and charges d'affaires. Whatever may be true "strictly speaking," these are who we sensibly understand to be diplomats.

Satow is not at all clear about the people to whom an ambassador has the right to talk and even negotiate with on behalf of his government, except to point out that he has no right to go behind the back of the minister of foreign affairs in the country to which he is appointed in order to negotiate with the sovereign of that country directly. Of course there is no way in which more than the barest rules could be laid down to define how an ambassador should go about his business in every situation.

The ambassador must be broadly free to use his own "tact and intelligence," as Satow puts it in his first sentence, otherwise his usefulness to his government and country will be very circumscribed.

Only a few months ago the foreign service of the United States was being criticized because it had made no fruitful contacts with the Ayotollah Khomeini while he was an exile in Paris, and because it had given no warning of how widespread and intense was the support on which he could initially rely in his own country. It is a very touchy matter to decide how far an ambasasdor should be in touch with the opposition to a government to which he is accredited, and when a situation is most delicate it is even touchier to draw the line between just being in touch and negotiating. But that is why we have ambassadors and it will be a poor day for the United States if the only contacts which it can make are confined to the stiff-necked diplomacy of which the government at home is capable.

A State Department or a Foreign Office are political. They are subject to the immediate political pressures that bear on their president or prime minister. The secretary of state cannot be concerned only with Israel or the Palestinians; he has to be aware, like his president, of the constituencies of Jews and blacks at home. The ambassador is at one removed from these pressures. He serves his sovereign — a king in the past; the people now — and not just a ministry. He is in duty bound to form his own estimate of the national interest in the country to which he is posted, and if he is asked to accommodate his actions too strictly to the concerns of the government at home his usefulness even to it will be diminished.

By accepting the resignation of Andrew Young — at what appears to be the insistence of the State Department, and against the advice and inclination of some of his White House staff — the president has politicized the ambassador's role. The danger in this is to him as much as to anyone else. What the president has said is that everything that his ambassadors say and do, unless he dismisses them, is his own word or act for which he can be held accountable by the world. He can no longer say, of an exploration that his ambassador is making, "But that was not me."

Sometimes it becomes necessary to lie on behalf of one's country

Refusing to lie on behalf of his ambassador, he is making it difficult to lie on behalf of himself. The false ideal of "truth in government" has never looked more threadbare. This administration is in the middle of making a major shift in policy when it is not in very good shape at home or abroad. Lambs are being thrown on the altar to propitiate the gods with a wantonness that would have astounded the most primitive societies. Andrew Young was hardly out of line with that policy at all, and only in the most inflexible technical sense did he defy protocol. There would have been no difficulty with what he said — no protest from Israel — if the policy of the home government had been clear.

In these circumstances, at the first inkling of what was afoot, the president should have sat on the State Department, and told it to lie: to concoct a lie with Andrew Young, and stick to it until the fuss blew over.

It was Sir Henry Wotton, himself an ambassador, who made the remark: "An ambassador is an honest man who is sent to lie abroad for the good of his country." He had scribbled it as a joke in an album at Augsburg, and it was discovered by one of his enemies who reported it to James I. That prissy king was profoundly shocked. He refused ever to employ Sir Henry again, whereas his predecessor, Elizabeth I, would have elevated him. Perhaps Sir Henry should not have made that joke — it puts the matter too baldly — but it does emphasize the awkward moral categories of public life.

The diplomatic or political lie is not the same as the private lie. One must be able to lie for one's allies — how else sometimes are they to be protected? — but also no less for one's enemies — their positions as well must not be too lightly exposed. Neither ally nor enemy is now going to feel very certain that its private dealings with the American government will not be bruited abroad in the name of a private morality.

A government that is in as tricky a situation as America now is in the Middle East must be able to put some distance between it and its deeds until these have ripened. This is all the more important because of two factors which have made that distance hard to maintain.

The speed of modern communications has made it difficult to separate the actions of an ambassador from the government at home. It is therefore essential that the fiction of that distance should be maintained. The role of the ambassador — which seems to have withered so much since the palmy days of the classical diplomacy of the past — needs to be exaggerated. A government needs to be able to step back and let him appear to be something of a free agent. Again and again, Andrew Young did this to the benefit of his government and his country, which could (as they did) disown him. Since last Wednesday we must believe that ambassadors are in fact their governments.

What is more, the role of the ambassador to the United Nations is wholly of its own kind, with few conventions. He is really an ambassador to ambassadors, not to a sovereign or a government where the protocol is clear. Since it is one of the functions of ambassadors in foreign countries to talk to other ambassadors — and not directly to their governments — the collection of ambassadors in New York must obviously play a very curious and indefinable game. I would have thought that this is one of the advantages of the United Nations — not what goes on in its public meetings, but the constant interplay of ambassadors who are day by day in touch with each other in a special environment.

In these circumstances, it would seem desirable that a government should pay special attention to keeping its distance from its U.N. ambassador. And as for the lying, let us not forget that it was an American government that lied to its U.N. ambassador, Adlai Stevenson, at the time of the Bay of Pigs fiasco, and made him lie. But what matters is that since last Wednesday we have to assume that American ambassadors are their government, and not merely its representative, and so American diplomacy will be bound by yet one more fetter to which "truth in government" and "sunshine laws" have already condemned it.

Ban on election polls 'threat to free speech'

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

The Davis government's proposal to ban the publication of opinion polls during provincial elections is a direct threat to free speech.

Premier William Davis would tell one segment of society, the media, that there are certain things it could not say during the course of an election campaign. The individual citizen would thus be deprived of reports on how the public feel about issues and leaders.

Such a restriction on free speech establishes a dangerous precedent. It could open the door to further limitations on free speech.

Instead of relying on the findings of reporters who can interview perhaps 10 or 20 or a 100 voters, the press now engages polling experts to select and interview a sample of hundreds or thousands carefully chosen to represent the whole community.

The chances of obtaining accurate reports are obviously far greater, and the reputable polls are usually correct within the margins of error which they frankly concede. If the press is to be faulted for use of polls, it should be because it sometimes ignores the margins of error and tries to read more into the figures than the pollsters report.

The polls are useful to the public because they add to the store of information on which the voter can make choices among candidates. Why should the citizen not know how others feel about an issue or a leader?

The politicians certainly want to know, and they intend to go right on polling during elections to find out how best to appeal to the voters. What they propose to ban is not polling, but only the publication of polls. In other words, they want information which they will deny to the public. This is clearly an unfair and elitist approach. It makes the politicians a privileged group, a position that Davis would find impossible to justify.

The argument against polls is that they stampede the voters. This is not only insulting to free citizens in a democracy because it assumes they have no independent judgment, but it is also quite unproven as a theory about the impact of polls. Despite numerous studies, there is no convincing evidence that polls influence some voters to support the leading party any more than they persuade others to favor the underdog.

Moreover, polls are not predictions. They are snapshots in time, showing how people felt at the time a poll was taken.

The debate about election polls ought to focus on a single point: The press is now free to use surveys of public opinion as one method of reporting an election campaign; before the politicians presume to take away that freedom, they ought to be able to show beyond a reasonable doubt that polls somehow harm the democratic process. They have not done so yet.

The government, even with the support of the opposition parties, has no business interfering with freedom of speech. How people are thinking at any particular point in time, including during an election, is simply an expression of free speech, and there is no justifiable reason to deprive people of it.

Monopoly updated

russell baker

Tanner and I are playing Monopoly, but I am worried about him. His play lacks spirit. Often he doesn't even try. President Carter is worried about him, too. The president says Tanner is in a crisis of confidence brought on by the assassination of President Kennedy, Watergate scandals and a traumatic war in Southeast Asia.

Tanner is throwing the dice. He passes GO and lands on the Reading Railroad. "I will buy it for $200," he says.

"With what?" asks the president.

"With the $200 I get for passing GO," Tanner says.

"Tanner, Tanner," I sigh, "when are you going to learn that the rules have been changed? This game was invented in 1935. Since then, inflation has reduced $200 to $36, less withholdings for federal, state and city income taxes. Then we take out your Social Security and pension deductions, which leaves you $16."

The president urges Tanner to keep his chin up. There is no future in railroads anyhow, he points out, since the government is reducing rail service as much as possible so Americans will not drive automobiles so much.

I throw the dice and the nine carries me to New York Avenue. "I suppose there's no point in me telling you that you're in Jail and can't move on that throw," says Tanner.

"That's right," I agree. "The Court of Appeals ordered me released because the police didn't read me my constitutional rights when they arrested me. You really have to keep up with the changes in the rules of the game."

I tell him I will buy not only New York Avenue, but also St. James Place and Tennessee Avenue and establish a monopoly.

"You can't buy St. James and Tennessee unless you land on them," says Tanner.

Patiently, I explain that I have secretly purchased St. James Place and Tennessee Avenue from the Bank, but kept the transaction private so as not to excite the market and run up the price of the property.

Tanner objects. Since I am doubling as the Bank, he accuses me of dishonest play. I tell him if he feels that way, why doesn't he go ahead and sue me?

"I didn't know the rules provided for suing," Tanner says.

"There's a lot you don't know about this game, Tanner," I tell him, "including the fact that no lawyer is going to waste time representing somebody who collects only $16 for passing GO."

"I quit," Tanner says.

President Carter leads him back to the board. "You've got to regain your confidence," the president tells him. "Put the Kennedy assassination and Watergate and Vietnam behind you and play like you've really got confidence in Monopoly."

Tanner throws the dice and lands on the Electric Company, which is one of my properties. "That will be $185," I tell him.

The rent, he objects with no spirit at all, is only four times the amount shown on the dice. "Since I threw a seven, I owe you only $28, or have the rules been changed again?"

"You have forgotten the new fuel surcharge on your electricity bill," I remind him. "Also, I am now entitled to charge peak summer rates. And, since you have reduced electricity consumption in response to the president's plea to save energy, the Public Utilities Commission has granted me a rate increase to make up for losses I incur because you are patriotic enough to consume less juice."

"I won't play a game where the rules change on every throw of the dice," says Tanner, walking away.

"Tanner," says President Carter, "don't yield to a crisis of confidence. You've got to go on believing that your children will play a better Monopoly than you do."

It is my turn. I toss a three and move to Chance. The card says, "Advance to St. Charles Place. If you pass GO, collect $200." I move around the board, collecting $160,000 as I pass GO, but am disappointed because Tanner doesn't complain.

"Why don't you ask me why I collect $160,000 for passing GO, while you collect only a cheesy $16 bucks?" I ask

"You're cynical, Tanner," I say. "I get $160,000 because I take my income from tax-free bonds and you get a cheesy $16 bucks because you take your income from salary."

Tanner throws the dice down the bathtub drain, but the president hands him another pair. "Your forefathers had confidence in Monopoly," he tells Tanner. "Don't turn your back on their dreams."

Tanner throws the dice and lands on Free Parking, where his car is badly battered by one of my construction crews which is erecting a 40-storey condominium apartment house on the lot. He is charged with criminal trespass and has to pay $75 to recover his car from the police department's Towing and Impounding Corporation.

President Carter urges him not to let Watergate and Vietnam get him down.

'Little operas' big success

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

The charm, vitality and entertaining qualities of a considerable repertoire of "little operas" is largely unfamiliar to audiences.

But things are changing. In France there is now a festival devoted entirely to works in the chamber opera genre.

And in Victoria we have Opera Piccola, founded for the Victoria International Festival in 1978 by J.J. Johannesen in collaboration with Pierette Alarie and Leopold Simoneau.

"Chamber," "piccola" — the terms mean the same thing: miniature operas in one act — are usually comic and filled with challenges to the singers that range from difficult to ferocious.

The two operas chosen to conclude the 1979 International Festival — William Walton's The Bear, and Rossini's The Marriage Contract — proved an appropriate close to a festival that has been nothing less than brilliant all the way. They are vivacious, funny, melodic. And they are splendidly sung by young, imposingly gifted casts.

This year they provide the additional satisfaction of being accompanied by members of the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra.

William Shookhoff conducts the ensemble, developing the full flavor of the humorous Walton score and the Italianate flourish and romanticism of the Rossini, keeping all things secure and on toe-tip and mostly neatly balanced except for momentary overwhelmings by the orchestra in the Walton. But this is not a serious criticism. It happens to most operatic ensembles in any theatre anywhere.

The Bear is based on a well-known Tchekov one-act comedy. The story centres on a young widow who has committed herself to lifelong mourning for a faithless husband but is jolted out of her pretense by the intrusion of an angry neighbor come to collect a debt owed him by the departed.

Remember the name, Joel Katz. This is a basso almost certainly on the way to the top. A great rich vibrant voice, a splendid personality, he fills the stage with magnetism. He develops character with skill, appearing also as the English merchant in The Marriage Contract, and except for the voice offering a quite different portrait.

Judith LeBane as the widow possesses a strong, clear flexible soprano that she manages with considerable technical assurance, infusing her singing of the role with appropriate color and fire.

Walton's score is wonderfully effective in its laying out of the colors and moods, thereby punctuating the action. Both operas, incidentally are sung in English, and what excellent English — every word is intelligible.

Six singers with outstanding voices, well-produced and technically polished perform the animated Rossini opera which makes great demands, particularly in the coloratura role of Fanny, the English merchant's daughter who is to be used by her father to cancel a debt.

The opera was written when Rossini was 17 and apparently fascinated by that exotic and far-off Northern land of Canada. The merchant who is to be paid off is a Canadian seeking an English bride. His entry clad in Inuit garb brought a hilarious reaction from the audience. He turns out to be a noble character and all ends to the benefit of true love.

Roland Richard's fine baritone, a joy in past festival concerts, was heard to great advantage in the role and the coloratura voice of Patricia Fournier as Fanny prove this singer to be another enormously promising young artist. Marie-Danielle Parent sang with great purity and affectingly as the maid.

James McLean in the tenor role of Fanny's true love and Thomas Oliver in a smaller part both sang and acted effectively.

Bouquets must be handed to Pierette Alarie for her fine direction. And also to be acknowledged is the attractive set design by Bastion Theatre's Tom Taggart and the costuming by Bastion and Vancouver Playhouse.

The operas will tour Western Canada in the coming months. For Victoria music lovers they are definitely a must-see.

The second and final performance at the McPherson is tonight. Singing the role of Fanny will be Shari Saunders but this is the only cast change.

New book features top Festival pianist

One of the Victoria International Festival's outstanding pianists, Robin McCabe, whose range and artistry has been admired in several festival appearances, is the subject of a book just off the presses of Thomas Crowell Books, a division of Harper and Row.

Entitled Pianist's Progress, it will appear Sept.21. The author is Helen Drees Ruttencutter, an editor and contributing writer for The New Yorker.

The book, an expansion of a much discussed New Yorker profile, will be distributed in Canada through the publishing house of Fitzhenry and Whiteside.

Publisher's Weekly has commented that "it is a fresh, compelling story and establishes Robin McCabe as a pianist with real drawing power."

The book follows her journey from Puyallup, Wash., to New York through Juilliard, her official debut, winning of the Concert Artists Guild competition and signing of a contract with a top concert management.

It reveals, too, that others possibly as talented have not made it and that side of the struggle is also illuminated.

Robin feels that a major break for her was the appearance of the New Yorker article and now the book.

'Horse is out of the barn'

The city sympathizes with a man who lives in a showplace McClure house but there is nothing it can do about a developer who is altering a heritage apartment block that will block the view from his backyard.

Tom Palfrey complained to the heritage advisory committee that the renovations to the Mount Edwards apartment block at Rockland and Vancouver threaten to destroy "an integral part of the flavor of the cathedral precinct."

One of the reasons he bought the old bungalow designed by Samuel McClure around the corner at 941 Meares was the view from the back of the old red brick apartment building and the stone hall at the back of Christ Church Cathedral.

Exterior changes to the Mount Edwards "threaten to be totally inconsistent with the style and period of the structure." The owner is installing aluminum windows in place of the original wood frames and is building a two-storey addition at the rear of the building. It will be a rest home for the elderly.

Palfrey asked that the building receive heritage designation to prevent any drastic changes, but the committee was told the owner had taken out a building permit before it was added to the city's heritage register.

"Whatever's happened, the horse is out of the barn," said Ald. Bob Wright.

Mini-buses for disabled?

Consideration of mini-bus service for handicapped people has been given top priority and a report on the idea from a deputy ministers' committee is imminent, says a municipal affairs ministry spokesman.

The idea of a mini-bus service arose after the B.C. Lions Society announced it would have to increase rates on its taxi-type service to the disabled.

The round trip cost will rise from $3 to $7 on Sept. 1 and to $14 on Nov. 1.

Lions associate executive director Ray St. Dennis said: "This is a very specialized, costly service. The money we put into this was deterring services to children."

Meanwhile, the Lions will appeal last spring's decision by the four core municipalities not to subsidize taxi-type bus service for handicapped people.

Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie says he will try to call a meeting this week of the inter-municipal committee to reconsider the subsidy request.

The Lions asked for $18,000 from the municipalities last spring but were turned down.

Two appointment buses in Victoria are used by 120 handicapped. They carry an average of 14 people a day.

"The four core municipalites had never supported this kind of service before," McKenzie said.

"The sub-committee looking at grants didn't really feel it was just the responsibility of the four municipalities and thought the Urban Transit Authority might take over the service."

McKenzie said any subsidy granted now would be considered interim until the UTA can decide how to deal with the service.

Larry Miller, the UTA assistant general manager, said the authority is awaiting word from the provincial government on its funding proposal for custom transit services.

That proposal, including the proposed mini-bus service, would implement the same kind of cost-sharing formula municipalities have had with the government on regular transit.

Boy, 16, charged in U.S. murder

Dudley Allan Bates, 31, died in hospital of multiple stab wounds.

Police said the boy, who gave addresses in both Victoria and Port Alberni, was arrested two blocks from the scene.

He is to appear before a juvenile court judge Thursday to determine whether he will be arraigned in adult court.

His identity is being withheld until that appearance.

The Port Angeles police detective branch said the juvenile arrived Saturday in Port Angeles with three other Canadians.

A spokesman said the four were staying with the suspect's uncle in an apartment building at 413 East 6th.

Apparently there were no witnesses to the assault and other residents were unaware anything had happened until Bates collapsed on a lawn outside the building at about 7 p.m.

Walkout at Duke Point going to LRB appeal

The B.C. Development Corp. is appealing a Labor Relations Board ruling which said construction workers were entitled to walk off the job at Duke Point industrial park near Nanaimo.

Peter Breikss, Duke Point project manager for the corporation, said the appeal will be registered with the LRB today.

A board spokesman said today the procedure for such appeals is that the appellant's written submission goes to the LRB chairman who then decides whether the case will be heard by a panel or by the full board.

About 100 members of various building trade unions walked off the job at Duke Point July 17 after members of the International Woodworkers of America showed up to begin work on a sawmill.

The building trades are embroiled in a jurisdictional dispute with the IWA, claiming the woodworkers' union is infringing on their jurisdiction by having IWA tradesmen involved in the construction of new sawmills.

The building trades are still off the job at Duke Point but the IWA tradesmen continue to work on the construction of a sawmill for Doman Forest Products Ltd. of Duncan.

The LRB ruled Aug. 8 that the building trades, in walking off the job, were not engaged in a strike but adhering to the intent of non-affiliation clauses in their contracts.

The non-affiliation clauses accord members of the building trades unions the right to refuse to work with either employees who are non-union or employees who are members of non-affiliated trade unions.

There was action today on another front in connection with Duke Point.

Dillingham Corp Canada Ltd., which has a contract with BCDC to do some dredging and land-fill work at the site, went before the LRB seeking a ruling that would force its employees back.

The employees have been off the job sporadically since the July 17 incident, the latest walkout taking place last week.

The Dillingham workers are members of the International Union of Operating Engineers, one of 17 member unions of the B.C. and Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council.

Few seek vanities

The minister said that considering the pressure the ministry has been under in recent years to introduce the "vanity" plates, he expected more than the 1,400 applications to date.

He admits, however, there has not been that much publicity and he expects a surge of applications once the first plates are distributed in about three weeks.

B.C. motorists have been able to apply for the plates since July 1. They cost $75 for five years.

More lightning headed for city

A new weak storm from the south is expected to bring more lightning and showers over Victoria.

But the weatherman said Victoria is lucky as far as thunder storms go.

The Greater Victoria area gets an average of 2.6 days a year of thunder and lightning compared to 33.1 days in Windsor, Ont., 30.3 in Centralia and 26.6 in Toronto, he said.

If Victorians wants to enjoy sunny weather, the places to go are Parksville and Nanaimo as Tuesday's weak front has passed over the area, he said.

"Most of central Vancouver island is enjoying sunny weather," he added.

Meanwhile, logging operations have returned to normal due Tuesday's rain in forest areas of the island.

The B.C. Forest Service says the fire hazard has dropped from high to moderate and will probably remain like that for the next few days.

There were three reports of lightning strikes starting forest fires Tuesday in the southern end of Vancouver Island, ranger Bruce Holloway said.

Today's Markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market rose sharply in active mid-afternoon trading. Thirteen of the 14 stock groups advanced, led by golds. Consumer products declined.

Advances outnumbered declines 221 to 181 with 225 issues unchanged. Trading resumed shortly after 11:30 a.m. EDT in shares of Consumers Distributing Co. Ltd. and Revelstoke Cos. Ltd. following halts on Tuesday. The companies said they are considering a merger. Consumers Distributing had risen ⅝ to $15⅝ and Revelstoke ⅞ to $11⅜ by 2 p.m.

Vancouver

Prices were mixed in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

In the industrials, B.C. Resources Investment Corp. was unchanged at $6.05 on 6,405 shares, Pagurian Corp. was unchanged at $4.25 on 500 and Bell Canada was unchanged at $21⅜ on 25.

On the resource and development board, Amber Resources was up .08 at $2.23 on 46,200 shares and SNA Resources was up .02 at .51 on 39,000 shares. Iona Silver Mines was up .06 at $1.79 on 22,300 shares and Azure Resources was down .04 at $1 on 18,625.

On the curb exchange, Trans-Pac Ventures was unchanged at $1.15 on 5,000 shares and Val Dor Exploration was unchanged at $1.15 on 2,500. Lincoln Resources was up .06 at $2.30 on 2,000 shares and Ruskin Development was unchanged at .52 on 2,000.

New York

The New York stock market held steady today, with slightly more gainers than losers among issues listed on the exchange. Stock market analysts said investors were receiving conflicting signals. Indications that higher interest rates lie ahead would normally push prices down, as would the hefty jump in London gold prices. But the possibility remains that a sustained rising market is ahead if tight monetary policy makes headway against inflation.

London

The London stock market rose moderately near the close of trading today. The Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed at 465.7, up 1.2. Most stocks were little changed but golds advanced. Canadian shares were mixed.

Consumers, Revelstoke talk merger

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers Distributing Co. Ltd. of Toronto has announced negotiations are under way for a possible merger with Revelstoke Companies Ltd. of Calgary.

Consumers, a major Canadian retail chain, said a further announcement will be made "as soon as it is possible to do so."

The company operates about 160 catalogue showrooms in nine provinces and recently purchased the 70-store chain of May Department Stores Co. of St. Louis, Mo.

Revelstoke operates 107 retail lumber stores in Western Canada, including one in Victoria, and is also in the concrete business.

Boom in B.C. mines puts grads to work

VANCOUVER (CP) — An optimistic outlook in British Columbia's mining, forest and construction industries is being reflected in the hiring of applied science graduates in such professions as engineering, geology and computer sciences.

This year, for example, 290 of the University of British Columbia's 300 applied science graduates were placed shortly after graduation, most of them going to firms in the province.

At the B.C. Institute of Technology, 1979 has been a record year for placement of its 664 graduates of two-year diploma courses in engineering, building, forestry, chemical, metallurgical and biological sciences.

The ability of B.C. graduates to find work at home has meant that many recruiters from other provinces, notably Alberta, have gone away empty-handed where before they were acquiring significant numbers of their new staff from the province.

And job-market experts say a major reason is business optimism in the mining, forestry and fishing industries.

Of UBC's applied science graduates, 35 per cent are engineers, and a spokesman for one hopeful recruiter, Alberta Gas Trunkline, said he had tried without success to attract new staff from the university.

"We tried to recruit engineers at UBC, but we weren't successful. We made many offers, but evidently most of them had already found work in B.C.," the spokesman said.

Jacquie Jones, Canada Manpower officer at the B.C. Institute of Technology, said graduates are virtually assured jobs when they leave school.

"Employers keep coming back here year after year to recruit," she said.

"The majority have been employed in B.C. as mining, construction and forestry technicians. There is no unusual swing to Alberta employers."

Some companies have not been bothered by the preference for British Columbians to stay at home. Shell Canada's Calgary office, for instance, recruited two engineers at UBC, six BCIT graduates in surveying, mining, electrical and chemical engineering and University of Victoria graduates in geophysics and computer systems analysis.

country club mall

Over a quarter of a million square feet.

Country Club Mall opens fall '79 with over a quarter of a million square feet of retail store facilities on more than 19 acres of land, and additional room for future expansion. With Safeway and Woolco, anchor tenants at opposite ends of the mall, there's still room for you under the umbrella.

Strategically located.

Country Club Mall is strategically located in the heart of Nanaimo's rapidly growing, major residential area. To over 62,000 Nanaimo regional district residents, this prime location will be 'Uptown'. And, Nanaimo, being the 'Hub' city of Vancouver Island, also attracts residents from the south, as far away as Duncan, and from the west, as far away as Port Alberni.

Slight drop for Doman

Doman Industries Ltd. of Duncan Monday reported second-quarter earnings of $2,387,000, down slightly from $2,451,000 in the same quarter last year.

However 1979 earnings are still running ahead of last year.

The dip during April, May and June was due in part to disruptions during labor negotiations, company president Herb Doman said.

With a new two-year contract signed, significant improvement is expected for the balance of the year.

The company had strong earnings in the first quarter.

When the totals are combined, the six months earnings were $4.9 million or 75 cents a share, up 36 per cent from $3.9 million or 59 cents a share in the corresponding 1978 period.

Sales by the forest products company during the six months totalled $49.9 million, down from $50.7 million.

Sales in the second quarter were $26.8 million, down from $28.8 million.

"With new two-year labor agreements now concluded," Doman said, "good conditions in world lumber markets and a discounted Canadian dollar increasing our net mill returns, we anticipate good second-half operating results."

Construction has started on the company's new sawmill at Nanaimo and it should be in full operation early next year.

Cash flow from operations for the six months ended June 30 totalled $6.4 million, up 63 per cent from $3.9 million at the same time last year.

Oak Bay approves bank plan

Oak Bay council Tuesday approved plans for expansion of the Bank of Montreal at 2219 Oak Bay Avenue against the wishes of Ald. Peter Bunn.

The bank will pay $64,080 to the Village Car Parking Reserve Fund in lieu of providing required parking spaces.

Bunn opposed the plan on the grounds the municipality is not asking enough of the bank — or other developers — under its parking formula.

Wrong house, man drowns

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Cockburn, 74, drowned Monday night when he apparently returned to the wrong house and fell into a swimming pool in in unlighted back yard, police said.

Slippery water to slosh fires

Slippery water will soon join regular wet water as a tool in the battle against forest fires.

Before the end of the fire season, the B.C. Forest Service's forest protection branch hopes to field test a new polymer water additive which lines up the molecules in water, allowing the water to slip more easily through a hose.

The chemical — polyacrylamide — could increase the range of a 1½-inch hose from 500 metres to 700 metres.

Allan Jenkins, a spokesman for the branch, says if a fire is intense, firefighters have to stand back.

"This would increase the range substantially," he said.

The forest service already uses a detergent-type additive which increases the saturation capacity of water.

Jenkins says they hope to get some modifications to the slippery water delivery system before the end of the fire season.

"It works on the kitchen sink level. Now we're looking into the business of making a more rugged system, seeing that it will stand up to punishment."

A system for injecting the chemical into a water supply was designed by Dr. N.G. Franz at the University of B.C.

The forest branch is working on modifying the valves.

The polymer additive, developed by Nalco Chemicals of Chicago, is non-toxic and non-polluting.

It costs only about a cent for every 10 litres of water and $10 worth of additive could last up to eight and a half hours.

It has been used to clarify water in municipal treatment plants in the U.S. and by some municipal fire departments.

Lack of museum art disappoints Indians

The Indian community is disappointed that no native art objects from the Provincial Museum are on show in one of the biggest exhibition of B.C Indians arts and handicrafts ever held in Europe.

Artist John Livingston said the display at the Museum for Ethnology in Hamburg, West Germany, is a big success but there are no contributions from the museum.

He said German curator Wolfgang Haberland made a trip to B.C. last year in the hopes of obtaining some art works for the display from the museum but left empty-handed.

Peter McNair, curator of ethnology at the museum, said the museum is not at fault.

"We offered some objects to Haberland but he was only interested in one piece," he said. "But it wasn't available as it had been loaned out."

He said the museum assisted the German curator in directing him to works of contemporary artists.

Haberland did pick up 700 objects of Indian art and handicrafts from the National Museum in Ottawa, the McMichael Canadian Collection, Kleinburg, Ont., Alaska State Museum and other U.S. institutions.

The display entitled Thunderbird and Killer Whale opened May 4. So far more than 40,000 have seen it.

Carver Calvin Hunt also demonstrated his work in the museum during May.

Apart from beautiful carved objects excuted by craftsmen more than 100 years ago and owned by German museums, the display features works of contemporary B.C. artists.

LITTLE GUY MAKES GOOD.

Chevy Chevette Now Canada's Best Selling Small Car.

Chevrolet is very proud to announce that in 1979* the Chevy Chevette became Canada's No. 1 small car. And for darn good reason. You see, when Chevrolet decided to build a small economy car, it drew on years and years of experience to create its design. And now, after less than 4 years, the Chevy Chevette has proven itself to be the No. 1 value car that it was designed to be. We knew you'd recognize one finely built, solid little character when you saw it.

VALUE

The Chevette has a personality just loaded with standard features. And we knew you'd welcome its low price tag. A price that includes so many features, even the competition had to sit up and take notice. Plus with three models to choose from: (a 4-door Hatchback rings in at $4,750, the 2-door Hatchback Coupe at †$4,610, and the nifty little 2-door Scooter at ‡$4,019), we knew you'd be hard pressed not to find one exactly right for your individual style.

FACTS

Now when we talk about Chevy Chevette's solid character, we're talking about a 1.6 litre engine with a 4-speed standard transmission that will give you an estimated fuel consumption/economy rating of 7.0 litres per 100 kilometres or if you prefer 40 MPG, reliable front disc/rear drum brakes, positive rack-and-pinion steering, sturdy double-panel body construction, sound-deadening acoustical treatment, body side mouldings, extensive corrosion-resistant treatments, a high energy ignition system, radial tires and believe it, even more.

COMFORTS

And when we talk about personality, the little Chevette really lets you sit back and relax. Just get behind the sports steering wheel and notice all that nice cut pile carpeting under foot. Not to mention fingertip control of turn signals, headlight dimmer, wipers, washers; AM radio, flow through ventilation, cigarette lighter and reclining bucket seats. All standard equipment.

MANOEUVREABILITY

And if you like to be close to where the action is, this little guy was built just for you. The Chevy Chevette can manoeuvre through the thick of it in comfort and style. In fact, it can turn you around almost as quickly as you can change your mind. Yes we knew it was all just a matter of time before the little Chevy Chevette would find its proper place in the sun, but that's not going to stop us from thanking you for recognizing it so soon. Get into a Chevy Chevette. Canada's No. 1 small car. It'll do you proud too.

New vehicle warranty 12 months/ 20,000 kilometres. 3-yr. perforation from corrosion warranty. Available Continuous Protection Plan.

Date with victim leads to arrest on rape charge

VANCOUVER (CP) — A rapist who made a date to see his victim again was met by police when he showed up at the 17-year-old woman's apartment.

Police said the woman showed "remarkable self-control" during the incident which began Sunday when a man knocked at her apartment door and asked for her roommate. After she let him in, he grabbed a kitchen knife, forced her into a car, drove a few blocks and raped her.

During the attack, she studied the man's features, police said, then made a date to meet him later in the day. When he showed up for the meeting, police were there to greet and arrest him.

Robert James Watson, 35, was charged with two counts of rape. The second charge involved an incident in which a 48-year-old Vancouver woman was raped after a man broke into her apartment Aug. 11.

Watson, an escaper from the Idaho State Penitentiary who was serving 20 years for rape at the time, also is charged with gross indecency, buggery, and breaking and entering.

He appeared in provincial court Tuesday and was remanded to August 28.

Forest strike hearing off

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Labor Relations Board has adjourned a hearing into protest strikes planned by disgruntled maintenance tradesmen in the forest industry.

The decision Monday came after the LRB panel was told the tradesmen, who had scheduled a 48-hour study session to start Thursday, had called off job disruptions.

The industry's 5,000 tradesmen, members of the International Woodworkers of America, Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada and the Canadian Paperworkers Union, had refused to work overtime and held earlier study sessions to protest terms of the newly-negotiated contract in the industry.

The tradesmen, who received $11.76 an hour in the new pact, said they wanted parity with benchmen who supervise the maintenance of saws. Benchmen make $12.16 an hour.

Coast and southern Interior employers went to the board for a cease-and-desist order to block the planned study sessions. When the panel received assurances that the sessions would not be held, it decided to resume the hearing Monday but only if additional disruptions occur.

Meanwhile, 600 members of the PPWC were off the job at three B.C. Forest Products mills at Mackenzie, 190 kilometres north of Prince George, as a result of a dispute over contracting out maintenance work.

Plans to alter nude beach eyed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The University of British Columbia is studying a report which recommends a $12 million erosion control project that would dramatically alter the character of Wreck Beach, a haven for nudists.

The report proposes a mammoth earth-moving scheme which would change steep 60-metre sandy cliffs on the tip of Point Grey to a grassy slope.

The report also proposes construction of a 1.9-kilometre long barrier of rock on the beach to protect the base of the cliffs.

Wreck Beach has often been the scene of confrontations.

Vernon charged in sewage sludge spill

VERNON (CP) — The City of Vernon has been charged under the Pollution Control Act following a July 25 spill in which 25,000 gallons of sewage sludge entered Vernon Creek near the city's sewage treatment plant. Since the incident, alterations have been completed at the sewage plant. Dr. M. R. Smart, chief medical health officer for the North Okanagan, said the spill represented little hazard to health.

Ex-Tel chief dies

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gordon Farrell, B.C. Tel president for 30 years, died suddenly Tuesday at the age of. 89. Farrell was born in Yorkshire and came to Vancouver as a baby in 1891.

B.C. Briefs

Pair sentenced

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Two men have been convicted of dangerous use of a firearm after a truck was fired on during a bitter strike-lockout last August at the Gibraltar Mine west of this Cariboo community. William Gray and Donald Nolan were each sentenced to 50 days in jail on an intermittent basis.

Killer recaptured

Charged

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — A highways department supervisor has been charged under the Fisheries Act with harmful destruction of a fish habitat in McMillan Creek near here. The charges were laid against Phil Erickson after complaints that the highways department damaged the creek by dredging and filling in part of it.

Appeal upheld

VANCOUVER (CP) — An appeal by eight businessmen against a proposed parking facility in downtown Kelowna was upheld Tuesday in the British Columbia Court of Appeal. The city would have borrowed $2 million to build the facility.

Alcohol tonic shelved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ruth Robinson has been forced to pull an alcohol-packed herbal tonic off the shelves of her health food booth at the Pacific National Exhibition, but another product that also packs a bit of punch is still being sold.

Robinson, of New Westminster, withdrew the Chinese herbal wine — 35 per cent alcohol by volume — after PNE officials told her police we about to move in. Wines with an alcohol content of more than two per cent must be distributed through the provincial liquor stores.

However, she is still selling other products, including a male sexual stimulant manufactured by a medicine company in Hong Kong. The label says the lotion strengthens reproduction power and restores sexual ability.

"I sell it because I think good sex is healthy," Ms. Robinson said. "It sells in Chinatown and hockey players use it.

"After all, they have long road trips and when they get home they have to produce. If they don't, someone else will."

Ms. Robinson said she and her son-in-law sold the tonic at fairs on Vancouver Island until the RCMP moved in and seized it.

There is another item on sale at her booth that has been overlooked by liquor officials.

"It's my herbal cooking wine and it also has 35 per cent alcohol. Actually, I didn't mention it to the liquor control man, but it was there."

Judge obsessed: Vogel

VANCOUVER (CP) — A provincial court judge in Richmond was almost obsessed with a desire to prove the newly-proclaimed Family Relations Act would not stand up in court, deputy attorney-general Richard Vogel said Tuesday.

Vogel, testifying at an inquiry into charges that he interfered with the independence of Judge Phil Govan, said the juge had an "abnormal interest" in the issue.

He said Govan's decision not to hear cases under the act was unpopular with the ministry, but no one had plans to move Govan to another court.

Vogel denied that he called Govan biased or suggested that he might be transferred.

Last April, Govan ruled that a section of the act giving jurisdiction to a provincial court judge on such matters as custody, maintenace and property settlement, is unconstitutional because it was a matter for the Supreme Court.

Court throws juvenile trials open to public

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal ruled Tuesday that members of the public, including reporters, have the right to be present at the trial of a juvenile.

However, the court indicated the trial judge has the right to regulate the conduct of members of the public at the trial, including enforcing the ban on publication of evidence.

Mr. Justice M.M. McFarlane said that the Juvenile Delinquents Act guarantees that children will be tried without publicity, but that does not mean the courtroom must be closed to the public entirely.

However, he said the act "contains a prohibition against publication of information which would disclose or tend to disclose the child's identity without special leave of the court."

"The natural meaning of without publicity is simply without making known to all or to the public generally."

Dickinson was found dead tied to a chair in his home.

When the trial began in March, Judge Malcolm Macdonald of the juvenile court allowed a newspaper reporter and a relative of the boy to attend the trial.

However, the judge imposed the condition the two could not reveal the boy's name or identify him or his parents in any way.

A defence appeal to the B.C. Supreme Court resulted in a ruling by Mr. Justice Martin Toy that the public and media could be banned from the courtroom. That ruling was appealed by the Crown.

Drowned baby identified

VANCOUVER (CP) — The one-year-old baby boy who was thrown into the Fraser River on Sunday has been identified as Hardeep Sidhu, police said Tuesday.

Police were still looking for the child's mother, 25-year-old Harjinder Sidhu. She is believed to have thrown her baby into the river and then jumped in after him.

A fisherman living on his boat in the area said he heard two splashes before he found the child's body floating in the river. The baby had a fractured skull, police said.

Tickets to replace warnings in pass

RCMP will aim more tickets than warnings from now on at boaters violating marine regulations in Active Pass where the Queen of Alberni ferry ran aground earlier this month, a police spokesman said Tuesday.

Inspector Bruce Terkelsen, responsible for RCMP patrols in the busy waterway, said both tickets and warnings were issued last weekend to small boat owners.

On Sunday, police warned a fleet of commercial seiners entering the channel to move over to the right side.

"There were a number of other incidents throughout the weekend," he said.

Terkelson would not discuss the grounding of the Queen of Alberni Aug. 9, but said the RCMP has not increased its Active Pass patrols since that incident.

"We have had seven-day-a-week patrols in that area for the last two years," he said.

"The patrol boat Harvison, based at Sidney, is out five days a week and the Athabascan, based at Ganges, patrols the other two days."

Terkelson said he will meet in Vancouver on Thursday with coast guard officials to discuss safety in Active Pass.

No one was injured when the Queen of Alberni ran aground in the pass while en route to Swartz Bay from Tsawwassen. However, repairs to the ferry are expected to take at least two months.

Cycle fuel-tank rules vowed

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department is planning to develop safety standards to ensure fuel tanks on motorcycles do not rupture severely on impact.

Ron Myers of the Road and Motor Vehicle Traffic Safety Branch said Tuesday the department has been investigating for several years the safety of some fuel tanks on competition bikes, which drivers sometimes use on streets and highways.

The standards would not become law for several years, he added.

Myers said the decision about safety standards is not related to an accident earlier this week in which five persons were killed in motorcycle-car collision in a Quebec community near Ottawa.

The bike's fuel tank ruptured on impact with the car, spilling gasoline over and into the car. The gasoline ignited and the car was engulfed with flames. The gas tank of the car also exploded.

Federal accident investigators say the motorcyle's fuel tank appears to have been made of fibreglass and possibly was built on to the bike.

Generally, metal tanks are built on regular street and highway motorcycles and non-metallic tanks, using various types of plastic as well as fibreglass, are found on racing and "dirt" bikes which are built differently.

Myers said a regular motorcycle occasionally will have a custom-built, non-metallic tank added, and some limited models were built with fibreglass tanks.

Myers said the department is considering standards similar to those drafted by a special committee of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

Standards developed by the society would be voluntarily implemented by the motorcycle industry and could not be enforced, said Myers.

Murray Hattin, of the Ontario transport ministry, said no licensing regulations stipulatewhich vehicles are unfit for the road.

Loto Canada scrap nearly over: Curtis

Times News Services

OTTAWA — B.C. government services minister Hugh Curtis said Tuesday he expects "a speedy and mutually satisfactory resolution" to the Loto Canada problem.

Federal and provincial lottery ministers from all provinces but Quebec and Prince Edward Island meeting here Tuesday said they had reached tentative agreement on a provincial takeover of Loto Canada, but refused to give any details.

Bill Jarvis, minister of federal-provincial relations, said only a few points remain to be worked out in the proposal for handing the $250-million-a-year national lottery over to the provinces.

Despite the optimism, the tentative agreement spelling out how much the provinces will pay the federal government for getting out of the lottery business must still be approved by the federal and provincial cabinets.

Ontario Recreation Minister Reuben Baetz indicated the federal government backed down from its demand for six per cent of the annual profits from provincial lotteries.

Federal Sports Minister Steve Paproski said that as part of the deal, the provinces will continue to support amateur sports which had been financed by Loto Canada.

Under the Loto Canada agreement that expires Dec. 31, fitness and amateur sport received five percent or $8 million of the $161 million in revenues generated by the federal lottery since it began in 1976.

Most of the revenue — 82.5 per cent or about $132.8 million — went to support the 1976 Olympic Games and the 1978 Commonwealth Games. The other 12.5 per cent or $20.1 million was given to the provinces.

Alberta Culture Minister Horst Schmid said the provinces agreed to pay $18 million promised by the former Liberal government to expand hockey arenas in Edmonton, Winnipeg and Quebec.

2½-month refugee processing

TORONTO (CP) — Federal immigration officials say they've ironed out staff shortages that led to long delays in processing Vietnamese refugees to Canada.

But Rene Papone, federal co-ordinator of the refugee program at the immigration department in Ottawa, said it will still take at least 2½ months to process privately-sponsored refugees from camps in southeast Asia.

"It will take at least to weeks to match up refugees' names with sponsorship requests in Canada and six to eight weeks to process the requests at refugee camps," he said.

On Monday, officials of Operation Lifeline, a group organized to encourage private sponsorship of refugees, said they had received complaints from some sponsors that refugees were taking too long to reach Canada.

The group also said it was taking privately-sponsored refugees longer to get into Ontario than other provinces.

Papone said the flow of refugees was quicker to the western provinces "because the church groups out west have been organized longer than Operation Lifeline in Ontario so their request for refugees went through first."

In Hong Kong, Canadian Commissioner William Warden said his field officers have been working hard to fill the airlift planes headed for Canada.

He said other government employees have been diverted to help the five full-time immigration officers processing refugees in the holding camps.

Ron Atkey, federal minister of employment and immigration, said in Toronto Tuesday his department had received more than 9,000 applications by private individuals to sponsor Vietnam refugees.

Haitians nab ex-patriot

MONTREAL (CP) — A Canadian citizen was arrested in Haiti Monday as he was about to board a plane home from Port-au-Prince.

Pierre Bernier, of Granby, Que., was preparing to board his flight when Haitian police nabbed him. He had been visiting relatives.

Bernier, 48, the father of two, had been living in Canada for 10 years. He lost his Haitian citizenship after he was granted Canadian citizenship.

Legionnaire's No. 10

TORONTO (CP) — Three more cases of legionnaire's disease have been confirmed in Toronto, bringing to 10 the number of cases discovered since the beginning of August.

Diane Rimstead, a ministry of health spokesman, said an investigation by Toronto health officers and ministry specialists continues but "can find no common source, no common link between the cases." More cases are expected "because . . . we are better able to diagnose it."

Ottawa advises two types of rig for smoke alert

OTTAWA (CP) — A consumer affairs spokesman recommended Tuesday consumers use one each of two types of smoke detectors for the best protection against household fires.

Jim Black, director of the Product Safety Branch, echoed the results of a report published last year by the Consumers' Association of Canada which said each of the two types now on the market responds well to some fires but poorly to others.

These are the photoelectric cell and the ionization types.

"No instrument combines both types," Black said.

"The ionization type picks up products of combustion or the gas. The photoelectric-cell type detects the physical presence of smoke."

Black said the new regulations for smoke detectors, announced Monday, were put into effect mainly to recognize the general standards applied to most devices currently on the market.

All fire alarm devices including smoke detectors now manufactured and sold in Canada must comply with standards under the federal Hazardous Products Act.

The standards were based on those established earlier by the Underwriters' Laboratories of Canada.

Alberta offers aid to P.E.I.

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed has offered Alberta's help in making Prince Edward Island energy self-sufficient through alternative energy sources, P.E.I. Premier Angus MacLean said Tuesday.

MacLean said that at a private meeting between the two premiers in Montreal last week Lougheed offered financial and other support in developing energy projects.

"He's interested in being of any help to us in the Maritimes and he supports the importance for us of developing alternate forms of energy," MacLean said in an interview Tuesday.

MacLean said Lougheed did not say how much money or what specific support Alberta would offer.

MacLean, who attended the Montreal meeting at Lougheed's request, called that premier's willingness to help energy-poor P.E.I. "an expression of goodwill."

The P.E.I. government is in the process of forming its energy policies, and he said he could not speculate on what reaction Lougheed's offer would bring in the Island legislature.

Mould mars tobacco crop

DELHI, Ont. (CP) — Blue mould has spread to more than 1,500 of Ontario's 2,600 tobacco farms, a spokesman for the Ontario Crop Insurance Commission said Tuesday, and the commission will be paying compensation in 600 of the cases.

Farmers are continuing their race against the disease by trying to get their crop in the kilns before the blue-grey blotches destroy their plants.

Gandhi tipped as India winner

NEW DELHI (AP) — India's president dissolved the lower house of Parliament today and ordered a December election which is expected to return former prime minister Indira Gandhi to power after the collapse of two governments in less than a month.

Reddy did not announce a specific date for the balloting, but official sources said the election will take place the first week of December. The official campaign period will start some time in November, they said.

Mrs. Gandhi's faction of the old Congress party, the Indira Congress, is expected to emerge from the voting as the largest party in Parliament, paving the way for her return to power less than three years after she was voted out of office.

"In exercise of the powers conferred upon me by the constitution, I hereby dissolve the House of the People," President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy said.

Reddy asked Charan Singh, who resigned as prime minister Monday in the face of certain defeat on a vote of confidence, to head a caretaker government until after the voting.

During his meeting with Reddy, Singh assured the president that his caretaker government will carry out a "fair and free" election in a peaceful manner, the sources said.

Reddy, in deciding on a mid-term poll, accepted the recommendations of Singh's cabinet which represented the views of the three parties in the coalition government that lasted only 23 days, they said.

Singh succeeded Morarji Desai on July 28. Desai resigned because he too faced certain defeat in a vote of confidence. Singh, however, said he quit rather than submit to Mrs. Gandhi's "blackmail."

Singh accused followers of Mrs. Gandhi of 'offering to exchange their parliamentary support for a halt in prosecution of her son, Sanjay, and other figures of the 1975-1977 state of emergency.

Reddy also met today with former defence minister Jagjivan Ram, who as head of the Janata party, the largest single party, had demanded a chance to form a government instead of resorting to an election to solve the political impasse.

A source in the president's office said Reddy called Ram, leader India's 120 million Untouchables, to clarify his claim of majority support. This conflicted with a statement by caretaker Law Minister S. N. Kacker that a majority in Parliament's lower house favored an election.

Ram's supporters reacted furiously to the decision by the president.

Janata party President Chandra Shekhar announced he will ask Janata members of the upper house to introduce a motion to impeach the president. However, it would have litle chance of passing since the party is in a minority position in the chamber.

Shekhar said Reddy's action was part of "preplanned conspiracy" to prevent Ram from becoming prime minister. He called for mass protests Friday.

Wildcat follows oil-protest row

DETROIT (AP) — The United Auto Workers union ordered 1,500 assembly line workers back on the job today after they walked out of their General Motors plant in Framingham, Mass., to protest a cut in pay because they stopped work to sign postcards to President Carter.

Union spokesman Howard Lipton said in Detroit that UAW president Douglas Fraser has sent a telegram to Local 422 in Framingham, directing them to end their wildcat strike.

Lipton said he understands the workers walked out because GM planned to dock their pay for the six-minute work stoppage, part of a U.S.-wide UAW-sponsored protest against federal energy policy. The postcards — signed by as many as 1.5 million UAW workers — are being sent to U.S. congressmen and the president.

"This is an unauthorized work stoppage and in violation of the GM-UAW national agreement," said Paul Wetzel, public relations director at the GM facility.

Robin Hoods for smokers

OFF CAPE PALINURO (Reuter) — Dawn was breaking over the dead-calm Mediterranean 30 kilometres from the Italian coast when a buzz of engines became audible.

Within seconds a flotilla of 20 high-speed launches burst into view, spread out across the sea in a perfect diamond-shaped convoy.

Men on board the 16-metre vessels were dressed like commandos poised for an assault.

A dozen metal and plastic fuel containers were lashed to the sterns of the launches, at hand to feed the powerful engines for a long sea chase.

The launches speeding at an estimated 35 knots towards the Bay of Naples to the north were carrying contraband cigarettes, engaged in a racket which funnels an estimated 21 billion cigarettes a year into Italy.

A pack of the same brand sells in shops for 96 cents and on the black market for 72 cents.

Cigarette smugglers, who see themselves as high-speed Robin Hoods, operate half-openly and to a large extent with impunity.

They do so because in Naples alone an officially estimated 60,000 people depend on the trade for their livelihood.

The Communist city government and even legal officials have all but admitted that smuggling is vital for the economic survival of the thousands of unemployed.

"Smuggling has developed into a necessity in the struggle for survival," public prosecutor Ugo Caristo says.

The authoritis, however, cannot afford to turn a total blind eye to the smugglers and they seem to have devised a sort of game governed by loosely defined rules to cope.

The first rule is tht no drugs or guns will be tolerated, and the smugglers, keen to maintain an honest image, stick to it.

Rule No. 2 — that the customs men have to justify their existence — means that every so often one of the delivery vessels which drops the contraband cargo into the launches is accosted at sea, and arrests follow.

The men, women and children who sell the illegal cigarattes openly on the streets, in trains, at high toll booths, garages and other outlets are seldom arrested.

The Tobacco Retailers Federation, which sells 90 billion cigarettes a year, is desperately anxious to stop the contraband.

The smugglers pay about $12 for 1,000 cigarettes while the shopkeeper buys the same quantity for about $44 and pays taxes on top.

PM trust funds nothing new

By JOHN FERGUSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Revelations about a $500,000 trust fund established on behalf of former prime minister John Diefenbaker completes the chain of prime ministers back to William Lyon Mackenzie King who have experienced the largesse of wealthy supporters.

Mackenzie King had a secret fund set up for him in the 1920s by Salada Tea magnate Peter Larkin and others to guarantee an income and he later received money to renovate his house, the former residence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

His successor, Louis St. Laurent, was convinced to take the prime minister's job in 1948 only after he was given money by anonymous benefactors to pay off his debts and give him a pension.

Lester Pearson, a former public servant in the external affairs department and later prime minister, entered politics in 1948 after anonymous benefactors set up a pension for his wife, Maryon.

As recently as 1975, Pierre Trudeau was criticized when anonymous donors paid for a $200,000 indoor swimming pool for his use at the prime minister's residence at 24 Sussex Drive.

And in 1976, an admission by the late Quebec MP Claude Wagner that he was receiving $1,000 a month from a $300,000 trust fund set up in 1972 is regarded as a major reason for his loss of the party leadership contest to Joe Clark.

But Diefenbaker, who died last week at the age of 83, apparently never benefitted from the fund. There is, however, some confusion over when the fund was established.

John Munro, director of the Diefenbaker Centre in Saskatoon, said Monday it was established by prominent Tories after the party lost the 1963 election and Lester Pearson became prime minister.

But Henry Borden, a Toronto businessman and former trustee of the fund, said Tuesday it was started in 1960.

Keith Martin, his executive assistant for the last 10 years, said Monday that Diefenbaker only included the fund in the most recent version of his will written Aug. 7, nine days before his death.

He directed that it be used to promote his memory through distribution of his memoires to high school students and construction of a boys and girls club in his home city of Prince Albert, Sask. He also directed that some of the money go to the Diefenbaker Centre in Saskatoon, which houses his papers.

But like the donations for other prime ministers, the source of Diefenbaker's fund was kept secret. The donors may never be known.

Tom Van Dusen, executive assistant to Diefenbaker from 1963-67 and a close friend, said Tuesday that Diefenbaker had mentioned the fund to him only about two years ago. But the former prime minister had said he did not want to touch the money and was not interested in talking to those who had set it up.

Ottawa lawyer Ken Binks, solicitor for the Diefenbaker estate, said he would not comment on the fund because of the confidentiality of the solicitor-client relationship.

The executors of the will, Senator David Walker, Joel Aldred of Toronto, and Mr. Justice Edward Hughes and Dr. Lewis Brand, both of Saskatoon, plan to hold a news conference Friday.

"I think probably after the press conference you'll have a better idea (about the fund)," said Binks, elected May 22 as Conservative MP in Ottawa West.

Evidence that Mackenzie King received money from wealthy acquaintances surfaced with the release several years ago of his detailed diaries.

While touring France with the wealthy Larkin in 1928, King wrote: "Mr. Larkin and I had an interesting talk about the future . . . He says to me he is decided I shall have an income equal to $20,000 a year which would indicate what he has in mind. He hinted as having made provision in his will."

Evidence also surfaced at the public archives that Mackenzie King received payments of at least $25,000 through a Boston bank account from former Senator W. L. McDougald in 1928 and 1929.

McDougald later was forced to resign his seat after a parliamentary inquiry in 1930 learned he made a fortune when the Beauharnois power company he controlled received concessions from the federal government while Mackenzie King was prime minister. There has never been evidence connecting the payments and the federal concessions.

Although King spent nearly all his working years in public life, he was relatively wealthy when he died, having acquired extensive land holdings which he bequeathed to the state.

St. Laurent, a member of the Mackenzie King cabinet, was far from poor, having worked as a corporation lawyer before entering politics. But he apparently had lost money during the Great Depression and had piled up debts.

News of the Pearson fund surfaced in 1973 with the publication after his death of a book about Liberal Walter Gordon by historian Denis Smith. Gordon helped set up the fund in 1948. He later became a Pearson cabinet minister.

Gordon said in an interview Tuesday that Pearson, who was deputy minister of external affairs in 1948, was worried about sacrificing the relative security of his public service job for the financial uncertainty of politics.

Gordon and a group of friends raised money to buy a $400-a-month pension for Pearson's wife Maryon.

"He asked, and I said at the time, 'If we do this, you will never know where the money came from,' " Gordon said of his conversations with Pearson. "He said, 'that would suit me' or something like that."

Gordon said the money came from friends, not corporations.

When Pearson died in December, 1972, he left an estate of $597,915.

Trudeau is independently wealthy and never had need of funds to provide income.

But the issue of the pool at 24 Sussex was a frequent topic of questions in the Commons by Trudeau critic Tom Cossitt, Conservative MP for Leeds-Grenville and a former Liberal.

William Teron, a millionaire developer later named chairman of Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation and a friend of Trudeau, came up with the idea of building a pool for Trudeau's personal use.

FAIR deal called unfair

efficient and less costly plan to administer," said Bill Hartley, former NDP public works minister who is now in business here as an insurance man.

But he said he believes the NDP's plan several years ago to use part of the gasoline tax to pay some of ICBC's costs was fairer, since the more people drove, the more they would contribute.

"But FAIR is "a step in the right direction," Hartley said.

Moving to the so-called "postage stamp rates" across the province is only just, Hartley said.

"Why should there be differences? The liquor board provides a bottle of booze in Prince George at the same price as it does in Victoria."

The private companies are going to find it hard to compete, Shane said, suggesting one of the side-effects of FAIR may be to eliminate the private insurers again.

"It's a possibility. In private ICBC has told them on at least one occasion they're not going to sit back and watch their business taken away," added Shane.

At present, the private insurers are generally confined to writing coverage for the extras not required by law, mainly physical damage and comprehensive.

Shane said one private insurance company said the non-discriminatory rates may drive it out of auto insurance entirely.

"The plan mystifies me," said Stanhope. "The only thing that's bothering me is the question whether these conditions will apply to the private insurance companies as well."

He was referring to the three-year $20 accident premium levied against motorists who make collision claims, and the $100 accident premium charged to drivers responsible for third party damage.

"I can see insurance companies being nickelled and dimed to death," said Stanhope of the $20 charge.

Now, a driver with $100 or $200 deductible collision coverage thinks twice about submitting a collision claim for an amount that is slightly above his deductible, because he would lose the safe driving discount and his premium would increase by more than the deductible amount.

But with FAIR, a collision claim will cost him only $20 a year more for three years. "A motorist will say 'I can afford that'," said Stanhope.

Pilots cool to Ottawa decision

The resulting government furor was described by Pierre Trudeau, prime minister at the time, as the greatest threat to national unity since the conscription crisis.

The royal commission, made up of three judges, was named to look into the matter after the CALPA pilots' paralysed Canadian airlines on the eve of the Montreal Olympics in 1976.

Then transport minister Otto Lang backed down in the face of the strike and ordered bilingual operations already under way in Quebec curtailed, pending a decision by the royal commissioners.

A French-speaking pilots' group, Association des Gens de l'Air, is understood to be delighted with the course of events.

Roger Demers, the association president, told a press conference today that English-speaking pilots and air traffic controllers who struck to oppose the use of French in Quebec air space three years ago would have a hard time doing so now.

Demers, whose group has been lobbying for bilingualism in Quebec skies, said the unanimous conclusion by the commissioners had resolved the question.

Acceptance of the report by the federal cabinet places opponents of air bilingualism in a poor position to object, he said, but it is "hard to predict" whether there will be a backlash.

"They will need public opinion to do it and I don't think they have public opinion (with them)," Demers said.

Demers said that since 1976 the emotionalism surrounding the issue has cooled and he thinks relations between English-and French-speaking pilots and controllers have improved.

"Slowly, gradually people have come to accept what is going on in other countries," he said. "They are dealing with it more rationally.

"They have realized that our arguments were well-founded."

The conclusion of the royal commission means that francophones will have greater access to jobs in the aviation industry, he said.

Demers added that the position of his his organization, which has 3,300 members, is consistent with the stance of the International Civil Aviation Organization and conforms with the Official Languages Act of Canada.

The Gens de l'Air will continue to exist, to make sure the government goes ahead with implementation of air bilingualism and it will lobby for creation of a Quebec regional carrier serving the whole province, he said.

Tsunami adviser has analysed Tofino tide records right back to the turn of the century and come up with what he considers a curious coincidence

Can scientists learn to predict tidal waves?

By AB KENT, Times Staff

Most people remember the 1964 seismic wave that wrecked the Port Alberni waterfront, the most stunning B.C. coast event of its kind this century.

That tsunami was touched off by an Alaskan Gulf earthquake that brought widespread destruction to communities there. Until then few people knew what a tsunami was.

But how many people know at least 33 tsunamis have occurred on the B.C. coast in the 70 years between 1906 and 1976?

Careful analysis of tide records spanning that period is part of a research study being carried out by Syd Wigen, an engineer-scientist engaged as tsunami adviser to the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay.

On the basis of what he has turned up so far it might be possible to actually prepare for tsunamis of the future.

For two years Wigen served as Canadian representative at the Pacific Tsunami Warning Centre in Hawaii, and studied in detail the 1961 Chilean and 1964 Alberni waves.

"I realized many possible tsunamis had never been investigated and no one had ever compiled a record of those that had occurred," he said.

It could be assumed most of the waves were too small to cause significant damage or occurred unnoticed on undeveloped, isolated parts of the coast.

By the time he had gone through the seismic records available to him — starting with the eruption of Krakatoa in 1883 — Wigen had isolated 1,600 earthquakes large enough to have caused a tsunami.

He turned to the Tofino tide records going back to the turn of the century, finding indications ranging from a wave only six centimetres high, up to 240 centimetres, the one that rose to 800 centimetres (about 26 feet) in the Alberni Canal 15 years ago.

A curious coincidence began to take form having regard to time, frequency and magnitude.

When he plotted the record mathematically, Wigen was surprised to find a new relationship on his graph . . . the logarithmic form had become linear.

Now he wonders whether, if carried to a logical conclusion, similar plots might enable tsunamis to be predicted.

Much research would be required to prove such a hypothesis, but Wigen is prepared to spend the time, and suggests IOS as a suitable location to base the work and build up a subject library that would be of interest to graduate students.

"What I am doing is very basic, very fundamental, but it never seems to have been done."

Prof. S.L. Soloviev, head of the Tsunami committee of the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics, says such a study is worthwhile.

Wigen said the advantages are obvious. Aside from public safety considerations, governments, industry and insurers would welcome tsunami predictability as socially and economically useful.

For example, risk analysis and cost protection factors would be of great assistance in the planning of large coastal engineering projects such as oil terminals and superports.

It is the kind of information required to give "a proper degree of protection for the Canadian west coast and Canada's contribution to the protection of the Pacific community," Wigen said.

Canada is one of 18 Pacific rim countries including the U.S., Japan, New Zealand, Russia and Guatemala who are members of the tsunami warning system based at the International Tsunami Information Centre. In conjunction with M.G. Spaeth, tsunami warning system co-ordinator for the U.S. National Weather Service, Wigen has just completed a report on the use of satellites in the warning system.

If their report is acted upon, it would appear to be feasible to reduce tsunami verification procedure to less than one hour, allowing ample time to warn people in the projected damage zone.

The system at present relies on conventional communications to get signals from seismic and tide gauge stations, resulting in delay. Wigen and Spaeth examined the possibility of using orbiting satellites to transmit quickly a large volume of data, on demand, from perhaps 100 automated stations spotted around the Pacific.

They conclude that such a system is practicable within TWS, and if fitted to existing tidal stations with suitable mounting structures, the cost per satellite detection unit would be about $15,000.

Wigen would also like to see developed "appropriate public awareness of tsunamis," enabling people threatened by one to know what to expect or to escape injury.

For instance, people on a beach or close enough to observe a sudden drop in the water level should expect a tsunami wave to follow shortly, and ought to move at once to higher ground. A similar precaution is adviseable for anyone near the sea who feels a strong local earthquake.

Wigen said he knows of no locally-generated tsunami in the past century, and he does not know what might happen if one does occur.

"But I think people should be aware that if the sea surface is disturbed — rising and falling — to take to higher ground," he said.

Sometimes the long-range effect is the more destructive, as in the tsunami resulting from an earthquake in Chile in May 1960.

The seismic wave generated on that occasion travelled 6,600 miles across the Pacific as a speed of 442 miles an hour, reaching the east coast of Japan in 15 hours with sufficient force to fill the streets of Hilo with mud, fish, sewage, broken power lines, poles, trees and debris of all kinds.

Buildings were swept away, waterfront installations smashed and large rocks and pieces of steel-reinforced concrete were carried hundreds of feet inshore.

Ask the Times

Q. I read in a magazine that television was started first in the United States in the late 1930s. Can you tell me the date and place? V.M.D.

A. Wrong. The British Broadcoasting Corp. began the first public service of high-definition television in the world. The first broadcast was from Alexandra Place, London, on Nov. 2, 1936. During the Second World War, television service ceased for reasons of national emergency.

Q. The 19th century English artist William Henry Bartlett travelled extensively in North America and drew sketches for illustrations in books. Can you tell me if he sketched on the West Coast?. R.H.

A. No. His travels were confined to Eastern Canada and the U.S.

Businessmen rush to grab locations in re-born Crystal

Businessmen obviously feel the new Crystal Gardens will be a boom tourist attraction and a prime place to set up shop.

Sixty have applied to fill seven service outlets in the refurbished Victoria landmark.

Six applications alone were filed to operate the garden's one large restaurant.

The deadline for applications was Tuesday.

Bob Murphy of Realspan Properties said today most of the applications are of high quality.

"Quite a number of applicants confirmed their intention of doing their decor in keeping with the Victoria atmosphere and the atmosphere of the Crystal Gardens," he said. "Many of them involved local products or local art."

Murphy said there were three or four applications for quality gift shops, two or three for tourist information shops, a few fast food outlets and several import shops.

There were also applications to open womens and mens wear shops.

Murphy says some of the proposals produced original ideas.

"I can't discuss them, however, because it would be be obvious who the applicants were," he said.

The selection process is expected to take several weeks.

The retailers are vying for position in a new centre that has such features as waterfalls, Japanese bridges, birds, rock gardens, a cocktail lounge and a tea lounge.

Vic High, Central to share

A delay in the first major remodelling of Victoria High School since it was built 65 years ago will force a split schedule on students going back to school next month.

Dura Construction Ltd. has blamed the delay on late delivery of supplies. As the matter was beyond the control of the contractor, under the contract, no penalty will be levied.

The decision to organize a split schedule with Central was made Tuesday when Greater Victoria School District was informed that partial occupancy of Vic High would be possible by Sept. 24 at the earliest. The district knew last spring the $1.6 million project would not be completed in time, but until this week officials thought at least partial occupancy would be possible when the new term opens.

Under the split schedule, Central's shift will start at 7:45 a.m. and end at 12:15 p.m. Vic High will have the Central facilities between 1 and 5:30 p.m.

The Fairey Technical Wing at Vic High, where industrial classes are held, and the Andrews gym and change rooms are not affected by the delay and will be used in September.

Victoria: the great unknown land

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria is an unknown land in the international tourist market, the head of a Japanese tourist mission said here today.

"Everyone knows about Disneyland and San Francisco but few know about the beauty of Victoria and the Olympic Peninsula," Teruo Yonemura said in an interview.

The numbers of Japanese visitors to Victoria and nearby Washington State is increasing in percentage terms but in numbers it is still not very many, he said.

Yonemura, president of the International Businessman Club, said he is hoping to bring dramatic changes in the outward flow of Japanese tourists.

"We will be encouraging many thousands to visit your area."

In return, he is publicizing the tourist potential of the Noto Peninsula, near Tokyo. Although he works in the capital he was born on the peninsula and he considers it, too, a forgotten area as far as international travel is concerned.

"Visitors all go to the big cities, to Osaka or Tokyo. Ah, but the people of Osaka and Tokyo, they go to the Noto Peninsula for their holidays. We want Canadians and Americans to visit it, too."

His task here is to get a declaration of a twinning arrangement between Noto Peninsula and Victoria-Seattle.

He apologized for calling it a Noto-Olympic Peninsula twinning.

"Many in Japan do not know the difference between the United States and Canada. I know the difference but many do not. When they get here, they will see the difference.

"But Olympic is a good name to use because it has good associations for the Japanese people. They know of the Olympic Games."

By declaring the two areas to be twinned, there will be an escalation in tourist promotions and an exchange between the two areas.

For example, if the idea is accepted traditional Japanese dancers would come to perform in Butchart Gardens or in some theatre in Victoria, if invited.

In a similar way, Victoria performers would be invited to perform in cities in the Noto Peninsula as a cultural exchange and to help promote the tourist industry.

Yonemura and his 15-member delegation toured Washington State Tuesday and then divided in two groups. He led seven to Victoria this morning on the Coho, while the remainder continued to travel to various towns in Washington.

"We found Washington people friendly but more interested in industry than in tourists. They have not yet realized the potential. They seem to be more interested in planes and farming and lumber. I think they will also see the importance of the tourist industry."

Victoria appeared to realize the importance of tourism but more could be done in terms of getting the message to overseas countries.

Yonemura, 38, is employed as a cultural adviser by the giant international companies based in Tokyo.

But he was born in Noto Peninsula and on a recent visit home he noticed the lack of international tourists there.

"I got the idea of becoming a sister to the Olympic Peninsula and everyone seems to be excited about the idea. The Noto Peninsula is preparing to welcome Canadian and American visitors."

There are 500,000 people living on the peninsula, which is across-island from Tokyo. It attracts 3 million visitors a year, almost all of them Japanese.

Meanwhile, the major Japanese cities are jammed with overseas tourists.

It should be easy to promote Washington State and Victoria in Japan, he said because it is one hour closer to Japan than San Francisco.

"It is the closest place to Japan. We should visit it first."

Police officials awarded pay hike

Senior city police officers will get a 14.7 per cent pay hike as a result of police board approval Tuesday of a contract which grants Victoria police union members parity with their Vancouver counterparts.

The seven inspectors involved will now get an annual salary of $35,400, retroactive to July 1.

The board approved the pay hike for the senior policemen as it ratified the union agreement for 132 members of the force.

c. 1979 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Late in a baseball season dominated by bare bottoms and bared souls — i.e., the young lady on the Yankees' bus; Reggie Jackson's psyche — attention has been commanded at last by the surprising performance of the Minnesota Twins.

In the two-year-old era of the free agent, 15 players have walked away from Calvin Griffith's underpaid organization, and some of them were among the best in the American League — Larry Hisle, Lyman Bostock, Bill Campbell, Eric Soderholm.

Yet, after losing half a team and trading away another half named Rod Carew, the nameless, shapeless numbers and silhouettes commanded by Gene Mauch have been and still are contenders for the championship of the American League West. When they shaped up recently for the final game of a series in Yankee Stadium, they were three games behind California's pace, only two back in the games-lost column.

"Murray Chass had an analysis of the Twins in The Times this morning," a visitor said to Mauch, "but he touched rather lightly on the manager's contribution. What does the manager do besides hitting grounders for infield practice and hearing confessions?"

"I have a stock answer," the manager said. "I can speak only for the last four years, when I've been here. This team has the world's greatest batting instructor."

"I won't ask what you hit as a player," the visitor said. It was .239. The manager-batting instructor's face stayed straight as a string.

"When these players have their troubles with the bat," he said, "they come to me for advice. I tell them, 'How the hell would I know?'"

Gene Mauch today has the unlined features and trim figure of the 18-year-old who broke in on the infield of the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1944. Only the silver fringe under his cap reminds the observer that 35 years have passed since then. In his 20th season as a manager, he qualifies easily as the Grand Old Man of Baseball.

"Who first hired you as a manager?" he was asked. "And what did he tell you?"

"John Quinn," he said. "Well, it was Earl Mann, who had the Atlanta Crackers, but the Braves had a working agreement with Atlanta and John Quinn was the Braves' general manager. I had a pretty good year with Milwaukee in the American Association in 1952, and some big league clubs were ready to draft me. But I decided I was never going to be the player I wanted to be, so I wrote a letter asking teams not to draft me because Earl Mann wanted me as a playing manager in Atlanta.

"Before that, though, in 1950, I was playing for Billy Southworth with the Boston Braves. You remember how Billy loved the old Cardinals' players who had won for him in St. Louis — Johnny Beazley, Walker Cooper, Ernie White. He made jobs for them, and once in a while one of them would let him down.

"One day Billy said, 'Hey, kid, come over here.' I was going on 25. He put an arm around my shoulder. 'You're going to manage in the majors some day,' he said. 'One piece of advice: Don't fall in love with your players.' He told me not to do what he did, what any manager has to do with players who put out for him. I thought, 'I guess one of his old guys was out on the town last night and let him down.' But I never forgot."

"One day," the visitor said, "we were arguing about the free-agent situation and somebody said, 'This means a club like Minnesota can never have a contender. Calvin lets his best players walk away and does nothing about replacing them.' I had to agree that the guy was right. But now you've got a contender. Why were the guy and I both wrong?"

Mauch thought a long moment. "There has to be some luck involved," he said slowly. "There's no doubt in my mind that if this club had done with players like Hisle and Bostock the way it did with Carew, we'd be stronger today. I mean, if the club had signed them and traded them, the way it did with Carew, we would have got something for them. But they played out their option and the club got nothing.

"We've been lucky to come up with some good people as replacements. Players with character, I mean. You can see how a player hits and runs and throws and fields, but you don't know about character until he plays for you. That much is luck."

The manager didn't mention a striking characteristic of this year's Twins — the way they execute the fundamentals of baseball. They make the double play; they hit and run; they bunt; with a runner on second they hit to right; with a runner on third they try to hit to the outfield. Their mastery of the basics can't be accidental. They had to be taught.

"We're not big guys," Mauch said. "We don't often win with a home run. A team like the Yankees, they can come out and not feel like playing. They're with it only two minutes at a time four times a game, when they're at bat. And they can win with two runs — a home run by Nettles, a home run by Jackson.

"We're not like that, but we can sustain an attack because we've got some guys who are willing to take a base on balls. They don't go up looking for a walk, but they'll walk if the pitches aren't there and keep an inning alive. We've got some unselfish guys."

Paopao shows Lions how; Eskimos trounce Bombers

The B.C. Lions broke a nine-game jinx at Hamilton and Edmonton Eskimos remained undefeated in Canadian Football League action Tuesday.

Reserve B.C. Lions quarterback Joe Paopao, pressed into service when Jerry Tagge was shaken up in the second quarter, directed the Lions to a spectacular touchdown in the first half and the Lions held on for a 22-16 interlocking Canadian win over Hamilton before 18,420 fans. It was the Lions' fifth win and their first ever in Hamilton after nine previous tries. They have lost one and tied one.

The Ticats, who didn't come to life in the game until the second half — B.C. led 18-3 after the first 30 minutes — fell to 1-6 in the Eastern Conference, three behind Ottawa Rough Riders.

Lions got their winning touchdown when Paopao, completed a spectacular 84-yard pass and run play to John Henry White in the second quarter.

"Joe did a hell of a job," B.C. head coach Vic Rapp said after the game. "He came in there and did the things we asked him to do. He threw two touchdown passes, but unfortunately, one of them didn't count."

Tagge, out with what was later described as a bruised or slightly strained knee, returned late in the game because "I wanted experience in there," said Rapp. "I wanted to make sure we didn't do something to cost us."

Paopao joined the Lions last season from Long Beach State, Calif. and appeared in two games.

In the first half, it was all B.C., with Paopao directing the Lions for most of the damage in the second quarter.

The Ticats, who got strong defensive support in the first half from linebacker John Martini and defensive end Jim Heighton, got their only points in the first 30 minutes when Lumsden was successful on a field goal from 38 yards.

The Lions, who lost their first game of the season 22-10 to Calgary Stampeders last week, scored first in the dying seconds of the opening quarter.

It was set up when Devon Ford returned a Hamilton punt to his own 45. The Lions eventually moved to the Hamilton 48. Tagge completed successive passes to White and Larry Key, and then hit Al Charuk with a 28-yard pass-and-run play for the first touchdown at the 15-minute mark.

Tagge was shaken up early in the second quarter.

While B.C. and Edmonton kept the championship race in the Western Conference tight, finishing the evening with 11 and 10 points respectively, Winnipeg and Hamilton saw their hopes for a playoff spot begin to dim.

The Ticats are three points behind Ottawa in the Eastern Conference cellar. The Bombers' 1-5 record gives them only two points, a full three games behind third-place Calgary Stampeders in the West and just barely out of last place.

Saskatchewan Roughriders hold down last position in the Western Conference but have a chance to climb into a tie with Winnipeg tonight, as they go against the Stampeders at home in Taylor Field. The game is scheduled to start at 7 p.m. PDT with television coverage on the CTV's Western network.

Veteran quarterback Tom Wilkinson passed for two of Edmonton's four touchdowns and — wonder of wonders — ignited the drive leading to the game's key touchdown with a 13-yard run. Wilkinson started the touchdown play with a lateral to Waddell Smith, who threw a sideline pass to Stu Lang for the score.

Mets trip Astros in weird contest

By Associated Press

In their wild and woolly, daffy and wacky history, only the National League's New York Mets could prove that a baseball game isn't over even after the last out.

There have been some weird happenings in the Mets' 19-year history and they have won and lost games in some strange ways, but never before have they had to end a ballgame twice.

Suffice to say that Doug Flynn drove in three runs with a single and double and Pete Falcone pitched a 4½-hitter Tuesday night — all right, it was really a four-hitter — as Mets defeated the Houston Astros, 5-0.

Falcone's toughest chore was recording the final out.

The fun started when Houston's Jeff Leonard fouled a ball into the stands with two out. Right-fielder Dan Norman, who had given chase, was slow returning to his position so umpire Doug Harvey called time but Falcone released the next pitch anyway and Leonard flied out to centre fielder Lee Mazzilli.

Or so it seemed.

Harvey ruled that time was out and sent Leonard back to the plate. Two pitches later he singled to centre.

Or so it seemed.

The Mets had no first baseman on the field since Ed Kranepool had gone to the clubhouse thinking the game was over.

New York manager Joe Torre argued that the rules call for all fielders other than the catcher to be in fair territory for a play to count. The umpires agreed and The Jeff Leonard Hour continued.

But first a word from Houston manager Bill Virdon, who claimed that if Kranepool was not in position the intervening pitches to Leonard shouldn't count. Again the umpires agreed, but Virdon said he was playing the game under protest.

The setback, Houston's fifth in the last six games, trimmed the Astros' lead in the National League West to 1½ games over the second-place Cincinnati Reds, who edged Montreal, 3-2. Expos thus remained two games in back of Pittsburgh in the East Division as the Pirates dropped a 6-1 decision to San Francisco Giants.

Elsewhere, Los Angeles Dodgers downed Chicago Cubs 4-2, Atlanta Braves nipped Philadelphia Phillies 5-4 and San Diego Padres shaded St. Louis Cardinals 3-2 in 11 innings.

In the American League, Minnesota Twins beat Boston Red Sox 7-2, Texas Rangers beat Baltimore Orioles 2-1; Milwaukee Brewers beat Chicago White Sox twice, 3-2 and 9-5; Cleveland Indians outscored California Angeles 12-7; New York Yankees trimmed Kansas City Royals 6-2; Oakland A's whipped Detroit Tigers 8-1 and Seattle Mariners defeated Toronto Blue Jays, 8-4.

Irish duo leading stats final series resumes

Victoria Shamrock players hold the leads in both scoring and goaltending departments during post-season play in the Western Lacrosse Association.

Kevin Alexander leads the scoring list with a high of 25 goals and 11 assists for 36 points, one more than Dan Wilson of Coquitlam Adanacs.

Larry Smeltzer, who has seen action in all of the Irish playoff games, has blocked 229 of 276 shots for a shots-stopped-percentage of .829 and a goals-against-average of 8.90.

Shamrocks and Adanacs square off in the second game of their best-of-seven playoff final tonight in Coquitlam and return to Memorial Arena for the third game at 8 p.m. Friday.

Cables win second

BURNABY (CP) — Tight defence and outstanding goaltending by Rod Bannister lifted Burnaby Cablevision to an 8-7 win over New Westminster Junior Salmonbellies in a Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League playoff game Tuesday night.

Burnaby, which finished second to New Westminster in the regular season, now leads the best-of-seven final 2-0.

Bannister stopped 37 shots and was particularly strong when New Westminster closed to within one goal late in the game.

Lyle Robinson paced the winners offensively with three goals, while Dan McLenaghen scored twice including the winner at 11:43 of the final period.

Paula Brunoro, John Swan and Paul Dalmonte scored singles for Burnaby, which held period leads of 2-1 and 6-4.

11 indicted in race fuss

ELKINS, W.Va. (AP) — Eleven persons were indicted by a federal grand jury Tuesday for their alleged involvement in an organized "10 per-centers" ring at Waterford Park racetrack at Chester, authorities said.

Speaking of playing blind!

ST. JOHN'S (CP) — Ladies competing at the Canadian amateur and provincial golf championships were told to expect several blind holes at the Bally Haly Golf Club in which the greens were hidden from view on the approach shot.

But golfers arriving for Tuesday's practice round were astounded to find the whole golf course was hidden by dense fog that had crept in off the Atlantic Ocean.

At one point during the morning visibility was cut to about 20 feet and the round was delayed three hours until the thick, white blanket slowly lifted. Heavy rain followed and by early afternoon the sun approached.

The golfers from across Canada, bundled in sweaters and an array of colorful rain gear, trundled out to the first tee with the fairway still partially covered.

One fore-caddy, who marks balls hit down the fairway, was slammed in the side of the head by a ball driven by Montreal's Denise Lavigne.

He was only slightly shaken.

Organizers were wondering whether rain, wind and fog would disrupt play as it had last week in Corner Brook, 800 kilometres west of here.

At the national ladies junior championships there rain and wind pummeled golfers and turned the course into a water-logged obstacle course.

This weeks event is a 72-hole championship with the provincial titled decided after 36 holes. Each province has a four-member squad and the best of three scores each day make up the final total.

BUILDERS FORCE FINAL GAME

One hit proves enough

Juan de Fuca Builders utilized just one hit Tuesday while eking out a 2-0 decision over Seaboard Construction and sent their best-of-five Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League semi-final series to the limit at Central Park.

The deciding game will be played at 6:30 p.m. Thursday.

Mike Newman came up with the lone hit, a two-out double in the second inning, which drove in Pete Rumsby. A walk and a sacrifice bunt had pushed Rumsby to second base.

Len Carolan picked up the pitching victory with a three-hitter. He struck out six batters and walked four while going the distance.

Randy Jackson struck out two and walked two while pitching the one-hitter for Seaboard.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Nick Nicholas came up with a three-hit shutout while pitching Victoria Athletics to a 6-0 victory over Brentwood in a Heywood Men's League semi-final game.

Duane Robinson led A's at the plate with a two-run homer in the three-run third inning.

Fish and game club wants a commitment

"A political commitment to care for the wildlife resource of the province is urgently needed.

"Critical wildlife habitat has to be protected in perpetuity for the citizens of B.C.

"This can only be accomplished by a drastic change in the attitudes of politicians with respect to wildlife/environment relationships."

This was the central theme of a statement to Environment Minister Rafe Mair by the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association on the Fish and Wildlife Branch's proposed provincial wildlife management plan.

The Victoria club agreed with the proposal's first priority of managing wildlife for hunting recreation.

"Proper management of wildlife will ensure adequate populations for both hunting and non-hunting recreationists," they explained.

The group believes "long-range wildlife management plans are necessary and that effective management be based on accurate and reliable information."

"This necessitates counts, inventory, determination of age structure, reproduction and mortality rates and the carrying capacity of the involved habitat.

"Public participation in the planning process must be encouraged, especially at the regional level," they added.

"These funds should be more in proportion to the importance of wildlife to the province."

Politicians in all ministries pay lip service to the concept of integrated resource management, in which all possible uses of the land are considered equally in the planning process.

"However, it is rarely practiced," says the Victoria club.

Administrative control of the public-owned land base is vested in the Ministry of Forests and the Land Management Branch, Ministry of Lands, Parks and Housing.

"The Fish and Wildlife Branch should have at least equal footing with other government agencies involved in an integrated resource management issue. The countless conflicts between the Ministry of Forests and the Ministry of Environment (Fish and Wildlife Branch) must be resolved more equitably."

Perhaps they should have also explained it's the taxpayers who are footing the bill for the current inefficient system in which the branch is charged with managing wildlife without any legislative control of the land base on which the resource depends.

Another problem, outlined in the proposal, was echoed by the Victoria club.

"The preservation of habitat is the one major unifying force between the hunting and non-hunting recreationists.

"Habitat protection is the single most important aspect of wildlife management in the province today."

The move is being made to protect spawning runs of chinooks salmon . . . Areas affected are in Muchalat Inlet, Tlupana Inlet, Tahsis Inlet and Zebellos Inlet as well as the tidal and non-tidal portions of the Gold, Burman, Conuma, Tlupana, Nesook, Canton, Sucwoa, Tahsis, Leiner, Zeballos and Little Zeballos rivers . . . Precise boundary locations may be obtained in post offices of the areas affected.

Canadians edged

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — David Fernandez hit a two-run, two-out double off the left field fence in the bottom of the sixth inning to give Aviano, Italy, Air Base a 4-3 victory over Sherbrooke-Lennoxville, Que., in the first game of the eight-team Little League baseball world series tournament Tuesday.

Cloutier began the game at second base, but was summoned to the mound in the second inning with his team trailing 1-0 and the bases full.

Cloutier struck out Robert Maerten to retire the side in the second, and pitched scoreless ball over the next three innings against the Aviano team, comprised of sons of military personnel at the U.S. Air Force base in that Italian city.

In the only other game, Jon Jones pitched a two-hitter and struck out 15 to lead North Little Rock, Ark., to a 3-1 victory over Ridgewood, N.J.

Taiwan has won this event seven of the last nine years.

Vancouver bowlers take Canadian titles

MONTREAL (CP) — Selina Silva of Vancouver won the women's singles gold medal at the Canadian Lawn Bowling championship today when she defeated Norma Grant of London, Ont., 15-4, in a playoff.

Dolly Sterling of Calgary finished third.

Ron Jones of London, Ont., won the men's singles title with a total of 14 points to 12 for runner-up Ken Huie of Edmonton.

Creery tops Adidas series

RICHMOND — Two Victoria athletes placed well up in the over-all standings Wednesday following the final in a series of eight track events comprising the Adidas Grand Prix at Minoru Park.

Mike Creery of Prairie Inn Hash-House Harriers clinched the over-all pre-masters' title with a victory in the 1,500 metres.

Trinidad-Tobago is tough

VANCOUVER (CP) — Trinidad-Tobago is proving to be a thorn in the side of the contenders at the women's world field hockey tournament.

Gudrun Neumann gave the West Germans a 1-0 lead at half-time and Christine Moser scored late in the game on a penalty stroke to give the highly-favored team the win.

In other games Tuesday, New Zealand defeated India 4-1, Wales downed Hong Kong 5-0, Holland shutout Bermuda 6-0, Japan blasted Zambia 10-0 and the United States trounced Fiji 11-1.

Sieke Boekhorst and Else Mieke Hillen each scored two goals for the Dutch team, which picked up its second consecutive victory.

Davis, Andrusyshyn, Gerela NFL cuts

By The Canadian Press

Zenon Andrusyshyn and Anthony Davis now have at least two things in common.

Both are former teammates with Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League and both, as of Tuesday, are out of work.

Andrusyshyn, who played out his option two years ago to try his hand — or, more accurately, his foot — in the National Football League, was among Tuesday's cuts by Kansas City Chiefs.

Anthony Davis, a running back whose stay in Toronto was shortlived and shrouded in controversy, was handed his walking papers by Los Angeles Rams.

Another former Argo, offensive tackle Mike Horton, was also released Tuesday by the Chiefs. A starter with Toronto in 1975, Horton joined the Chiefs this year as a free agent.

Andrusyshyn, a native of West Germany who grew up in Oakville, Ont., signed with the Chiefs last season after a seven-year career with the Argos where he performed both punting and placekicking duties. He was third among American Conference punters last season with a punting average of 41.1 yards.

Davis, a former University of Southern California standout, was designated as waived-injured because of a broken rib he suffered in the Rams' pre-season game Aug. 12 against New England Patriots.

He turned pro in 1975 with Southern California Sun of the World Football League and signed with Toronto in 1976. His stay in the CFL was punctuated by indifferent play and an inability to get along with head coach Russ Jackson.

Davis signed with Tampa Bay Buccaneers of the NFL the following year and has bounced from club to club ever since. He was traded to Houston following the 1977 season and released by the Oilers early in 1978. He was signed by the Rams late in the season.

Meanwhile in the Pittsburgh Steelers' camp, another Canadian was making news.

Roy Gerela, who suffered through the worst of his eight NFL seasons as a Steeler last year, was released after Pittsburgh was unable to swing a trade for the Powell River, B.C., native. His release leaves the placekicking job in the hands of rookie Matt Bahr of Penn State.

At the beginning of training camp, Gerela knew his job was on the line and even a pair of 48-yard field goals in the Steelers' win last Sunday over New York Jets didn't help. He took the news philosophically.

"It's a hazardous occupation," he said. "What's to worry? That makes for ill health. You just do the best you can."

Gerela, whose longest field goal — 50 yards — came 10 years ago in his rookie season with Houston Oilers, led the American Conference in field goals three times and ranks 13th on the all-time NFL scoring list with 894 points — 731 of them in Pittsburgh.

The Steelers, who, like every other NFL club, reduced their roster to the 50-player maximum Tuesday, also traded veteran defensive back Tony Dungy to San Francisco '49ers for an undisclosed draft choice. They must make five more deletions before the regular-season opener Sept. 2.

The '49ers also acquired strong safety Tim Gray from Kansas City in exchange for an undisclosed draft choice.

Troy takes Gold Cup for sixth straight win

Champion jockey Willie Carson unleashed the three-year-old thoroughbred approaching the final furlong of the 10½-furlong race and he shot past leader Crimson Beau.

Troy has won all his six races this season, including the Epsom Derby, the Irish Derby, and the King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Stakes.

Troy, whose purse of $110,618 took his total winnings to more than $920,000, has been syndicated as a stallion for a total of $16.5 million.

USED TIRE ROUND-UP

It's Round-Up Time at Goodyear. We're rounding up all the used tires we can get our lasso around . . . And we're allowing top dollar for them as trade-ins on new Goodyear tires.

UP TO $60 TRADE-IN FOR THE FOUR TIRES* OFF YOUR VEHICLE depending on size and type

On the purchase of four new GOODYEAR RADIAL TIRES

Up to $30 on the purchase of four new Goodyear Non-Radial Tires depending on size and type.*

*Proportionate trade-in allowance for one, two or three tires.

HURRY! CORRAL CLOSES SEPT. 1

If you need new tires in the near future, consider this: Most tire failures occur in the last few months of tire life. Why take chances, we'll pay you for the unused mileage in your old tires so you can avoid the risk.

Trade-in allowance will vary depending on size and type of tire traded and purchased.

Goodyear's wide range of Radial Tires offers you a choice of proven designs with Flexten, Steel or Fiberglass Belts.

If you don't need radials, Goodyear also has a wide selection of Bias Ply and Bias Belted tires. Before you buy any tires come to Goodyear and talk things over.

Brantford a tough test

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Professionalism has turned the 1979 Canadian Amateur golf championship into a wide-open affair.

Rod Spittle of Niagara Falls, Ont., the defending champion the last two years, is not back to defend his amateur title after he turned professional for the 1979 golf season.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby, who is enjoying a fine year on the Professional Golfers Association tour, preceded Spittle in excellence on the amateur scene and won the national championship back-to-back in 1975 and 1976.

So for today's opening round in the four-day championship at the lush par-72, 6,595-yard Brantford Golf and Country Club, you have to go back to 1974 to find a former champion who still is in the amateur ranks — Doug Roxburgh.

What about Doug Roxburgh?

Well to begin with, the 27-year-old native of Vancouver is being touted along with Gary Cowan of Kitchener, Ont. and Rafael Alarcon of Guadalajara, Mexico, as one of the pre-tournament favorites.

In 1971, Roxburgh finished in a first-place tie with Richard Siderowf of Easton, Conn., only to lose on the first hole of the playoff.

The following year he made certain that he would not flirt with the possibility of another playoff by winning the championship by a four-shot margin over Dave Barr of Kelowna, B.C.

He came back to win again in 1974 and the following year finished second, four shots back of Nelford.

Roxburgh also is the backbone of the British Columbia team that competes in the Willingdon Cup interprovincial team matches that are held concurrently with the Amateur.

Both Roxburgh and British Columbia are given a good shot at winning.

"I wouldn't know about that," said Roxburgh. "My game's not the greatest now. I've seen it better and I wish it was now. Right now I'd like to be putting better."

Roxburgh, as did many of the other golfers in the field of 166, had nothing but praise for the Brantford course, which is celebrating its centennial.

"This is just a beautiful course," he said. "I've only played it the past two days and I love it. You have to be able to make all the shots to win here."

Nick Weslock, a four-time champion of this event (1957, 1963, 1964 and 1966) who is a member of Brantford, also praised the layout.

"In the last 20 years I've never played a course as beautifully conditioned and as good a test of golf as this course for the national championsip," Weslock said. "And remember, I've been in over 30 of 'em."

The Willingdon competition is an aggregate event that takes in the scores of the players from the 10 provinces over the first two days of the Amateur. Each team is comprised of four golfers, with the low three scores each day counting in the Willingdon standings.

Following Thursday's play the field will be cut to the low 70 and ties for the final 36 holes.

Furlano takes title

MONTREAL (CP) — Nick Furlano of Toronto, having rededicated himself to his craft, won the Canadian lightweight boxing championship from Gaetan Hart of Buckingham, Que., in a 12-round split decision Tuesday night.

Furlano lost a unanimous decision to Hart here June 26.

Judge Bruno Beaudry scored it 58-53 for Furlano, and judge Desmond Greene had it 58-52. Judge J. C. Theroux saw it even at 56-56.

The Canadian Press scored it 58-56 for Furlano.

Suggs inducted into golf's hall-of-fame

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Louise Suggs, winner of 50 professional titles, and turn-of-the-century player Walter J. Travis were inducted into the World Golf Hall of Fame Tuesday.

"It's like I'm playing in my first tournament," said Suggs. "I'm so nervous and excited I couldn't even eat a sandwich for lunch."

Suggs, 56, who won both the United States and British women's amateur before turning pro in 1949, was the seventh woman named to the Hall of Fame and was the only person this year to be named on the necessary 75 per cent of the votes cast by the Golf Writers Association of America.

Ipswich stops Arsenal side

LONDON (Reuter) — Arsenal, the English Football Association Cup winner, which began its English League soccer program with a 4-0 win at Brighton on Saturday, crashed 2-0 at home to Ipswich Tuesday night.

A first-half goal by Irish centreback Allan Hunter and one later by Dutch midfield star Arnold Muhren settled the points. Ipswich beat Arsenal in the Cup final 15 months ago but the London club returned to Wembley to triumph a year later.

Middlesbrough, which scored a 3-1 win in London over Tottenham three days ago, underlined its form by beating Manchester City 3-0 Tuesday. Australian youngster Craig Johnston gave Middlesbrough a half-time lead.

B.C. Cyclists here for 'Mini-Tour'

Cyclists from all over British Columbia are expected to take part in the annual "Mini-Tour" sponsored by Victoria Wheelers this weekend.

The three-stage event consists of a road race and time trial Saturday and another road race Sunday.

On Saturday, the road race starts at 11 a.m. on Wallace Drive near Centennial Park in Saanich and the time trial begins at 6 p.m. at the Prairie Inn on East Saanich Road.

Edinburgh Academical Cricket Club of Scotland, founded in 1854, opened a tour of British Columbia and California this afternoon at Windsor Park.

The touring club was scheduled to face a President's XI from the Victoria and District Cricket Association.

Two other matches are planned at Beacon Hill Park. Edinburgh will tackle Vagabonds, the District Association's touring side, at 1:30 p.m. Thursday and finish up the Victoria leg of its visit with a match against a District XI at 11:30 a.m. Friday.

Winter boxla denied funds

A request for lottery funding by the British Columbia Lacrosse Association to start a winter league has been rejected but the BCLA has found an ally in Wally Donaldson, commissioner of the rival Western Lacrosse Association.

Donaldson said that the BCLA applied for federal and provincial grants totalling $50,000 from Loto Canada and the Western Express Lottery Foundation.

Even though the BCLA competes with his league, Donaldson said he finds it hard to understand why it was turned down.

He said lacrosse is Canada's national sport but canoists get money to practise on a stream in Panama and skiers are sufficiently funded to spend their summers training in South America.

The BCLA applied for a grant or a three-year loan for renovations to the floor of the Agrodome at the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver.

The Agrodome was to be the home of four of five teams in the league which would have a fifth club in Victoria.

The PNE also refused to help with the floor renovations.

Saanich club takes a beating

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — Jamie Batley scored five goals and five assists Tuesday to lead Peterborough to a 12-4 victory over Saanich, in a Division A game on the second day of the Canadian peewee lacrosse championships.

In an all-Ontario matchup in Division B, Jeff Champagne scored six times to pace Windsor to a 9-6 win over Kitchener.

OPEC hikes defended in court

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is unfairly taking the blame for U.S. economic woes, says a lawyer in a price-fixing suit against members of the oil cartel.

And U.S. District Judge Andrew Hauk, hearing the case, suggests that members of the cartel might have raised crude oil prices to protect themselves.

The comments came Tuesday as Stanley Foster, an international economist, testified in the second day of hearings on the suit, filed last December by the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers.

The suit alleges OPEC and its 13 members violated the Sherman Anti-trust Act by meeting together to fix oil prices. The union contends the oil producers are subject to U.S. anti-trust laws because they do business in the United States. The union is seeking an injunction barring future oil-price increases in excess of U.S. inflation rates.

In questioning Foster, Khalid Abdullah Tariq Al Mansour, a lawyer for a group called Concerned Black Americans in Support of Africa and the Middle East, said that "OPEC is an expedient scapegoat for American economic troubles."

Concerned Black Americans has filed friend-of-the-court briefs in the case on behalf of the oil-producing countries and has been allowed to question union witnesses.

Foster contended that OPEC increases in crude-oil prices — the most recent in June — have helped to fuel double-digit inflation in the United States. The lawyers for the Concerned Black Americans suggested the Vietnam war and price increases by U.S. oil companies were principally to blame.

The judge said he hopes to make a ruling in the suit on Friday.

U.S. firm against PLO

Times News Services

The United States will not sponsor any resolution in the United Nations Security Council supporting Palestinian "rights" and is prepared to use its veto power to block any such measure, Robert Strauss, special U.S. envoy on the Middle East, said today.

He and other senior advisers unanimously recommended to President Jimmy Carter on Tuesday that the U.S. position be against passing a new resolution now because of the "hesitation" he found in both Israel and Egypt during recent talks, he said.

If such a resolution is introduced in the UN Security Council debate that begins Thursday, the U. S. response will be "negative," Strauss said.

In the Council, the U.S. has the power, through its veto, to kill any modification of the longstanding UN resolutions affirming Israel's right to exist within defensible borders and dealing with the Palestinian issue strictly as a refugee problem.

Meanwhile, Palestinian guerrillas traded artillery and rocket fire with Israeli gunners today and foiled a seaborne assault by Israeli commandos near the southern coastal town of Adloun, reports from the area said.

Hospital officials in Sidon and Tyre said more than 30 persons were treated over the past day for shrapnel wounds and three others were pronounced dead on arrival from the area.

Most of the casualties were women or children and the English-language newspaper Ike described Tuesday as "Children's Massacre Day."

In the frontier town of Hasbaya, two children were killed by shellfire. In the market town of Nabatiyeh, a 14-year-old boy was killed in a school run by Maronite (Christian) nuns and eight other students were wounded.

Reports from the area said in a night-long artillery barrage Israeli and Lebanese rightist gunners shelled a string of villages in southern Lebanon. Palestinian guerrillas retaliated by firing artillery and Soviet-made Katiusha rockets into Israel and the frontier's rightist militia-held enclave towns of Majayoun and Qleia.

Travellers from the region said a seaborne Israeli commando unit tried to land on the coast north of Tyre during the night but Palestinian guerrilla defenders repulsed the raiders.

Palestinian guerrilla officials confirmed the incident but said details of the hour-long exchange of heavy machine-gun fire near the coastal town of Adloun were not yet available.

In Israel, two bombs exploding 10 minutes apart ripped through a crowded Tel Aviv amusement park Tuesday.

Storm of century blamed

OLYMPIA (AP) — It was the force of wind and waves from a "100-year storm" which sank the Hood Canal Bridge, and not any weakness in the span itself, engineers reported Tuesday.

"I don't believe any maintenance program would have made any significant change in the bridge that would have allowed it to withstand such a storm," said Fran Murphy, president of Tokola Offshore, the lead firm hired to study the sinking and recommend a replacement structure.

"You would still have lost the bridge," he told a meeting of the Washington Transportation Commission.

Forces from the wind and waves from the storm which destroyed the west half of the floating bridge early Feb. 13 were the strongest in 100 years, said the report of the consultants.

An already fierce winter storm from the Pacific, which swept a broad area at a time of high winter tides, was augmented by a freakish "storm within a storm" which pushed wind gusts to 200 kilometres an hour.

The Hood Canal runs along the east side of the Olympic Peninsula, west of Seattle.

Those were conclusions of the team's weather consultant, said Ed Wortman, chairman of the project advisory board and a Tokola vice president. The information in the report will provide the basis for recommendations on what kind of structure should replace the sunken bridge.

Until a replacement is built, passengers are being taken across the canal on a ferry and ferry service for autos is to be started.

Soviet ships eyed

TOKYO (AP) — A Soviet naval force of five ships was spotted sailing north between Japan and South Korea, the Japanese defence agency reported.

Fate of stowaway pair was to be 'cooked alive'

VERNON, Calif. (UPI) — Two young men — perhaps AWOL American soldiers trying to smuggle themselves back to the United States from Europe — died of thirst or were "cooked alive" in a sealed container of paper shipped from Finland to California.

The decomposed bodies were found Monday when the container was opened on arrival at the Pacific Press Co.

Detective Sgt. Bob Anderson said, "It was like they were cooked alive. You figure they were in 150-, maybe 160-degree heat for more than a month," he said, in the hold of a ship and while the box was carried across the deserts of the U.S. Southwest.

Police and military authorities were trying to confirm the identities from dogtags found on the bodies.

No names or home towns were released, but police said a driver's license found on one of the bodies was issued to a 20-year-old man from Ringgold, Ga.

Police said they were still trying to piece together the route followed by the 40-foot-long box, but records were skimpy. The box had been loaded with 25 tons of paper in large rolls weighing almost a ton apiece and sealed virtually air-tight in Europe.

The container apparently was aboard a freighter that sailed from the Finnish port of Kotka, near Helsinki, July 3 or 4, and was unloaded at Houston or Galveston, Tex., around Aug. 8, then carried by truck and train to Southern California.

"We have no real clues," said Anderson. "This is pure conjecture, but they (the victims) were probably AWOL from an Army base in Europe, probably in Germany."

Detectives found four cartons of cigarettes, dozens of chocolate bars and an empty German beer case, but no beer cans or bottles.

"If they did go AWOL, it was pretty poor planning," Anderson said.

A visit to an unknown world for Israelis

CAIRO (Reuter) — A group of Israeli tourists arrived in Egypt on Tuesday to see "an unknown world."

Said Sara Kfir, one of the party of 23: "It is really unbelievable. I am here in Egypt with which we fought four wars over the past 30 years. I hope we never go to war again."

The group was escorted by several Egyptian policemen through immigration and custom departments.

One officer said: "These are unusual visitors and we want to give them special treatment so that they may long remember their first visit to Egypt."

The tour was organized by an Israeli tourist agency, Tourolam. One week in Egypt costs about $600 (U.S.) a person.

Tourolam representative Meir Greiver said that as of next month Israeli groups will be coming every week.

He said: "Egypt is an unknown world for us. We have seen Egyptians over the past 30 years through barbed wire and behind guns. We are here now to see the real Egyptians."

The group included Freddy Rosenblum and his wife who were born in Cairo and left Egypt in 1948. They came for a surprise visit to his sister and her four sons.

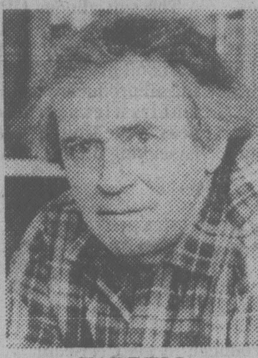
Studs Lonigan fame author Farrell dies



FARRELL

NEW YORK (AP) — James T. Farrell, award-winning novelist and author of the Studs Lonigan trilogy, died early today at his home in Manhattan. He was 75.

Farrell was in his apartment when he was stricken by a heart attack and died at 3:20 a.m. EDT, said Joyce Knoller, who described herself as a friend of the family.

Farrell's more than 20 books include, A Brand New Life, published in 1972; Boarding House Blues, 1961; and A World I Never Made, which was the subject of a censorship trial in 1937.

Farrell's writings were notable for their frankness and accuracy of detail and also for their length, which prompted some critics to say the works occasionally degenerated into monotony.

Farrell was born in Chicago on Feb. 27, 1904, the son of James Francis and Mary Daly Farrell. He went to parochial schools on Chicago's South Side and attended DePaul University at night for about six months before entering the University of Chicago, which he attended for about three years until 1929.

Farrell married Patricia Butler, the first of his three wives, in 1931. That marriage ended in divorce, as did his second to Hortense Alden in 1955. Farrell was separated in 1958 from his third wife, Dorothy Butler, whom he had married in 1955.

Farrell once described his books as written in the "naturalistic or realistic tradition."

"The purpose of these works is, stated generally, to recreate a sense of American life as I have seen it, as I have imagined it, and as I have reflected upon and evaluated it," he said.

Farrell once said a motto by the philosopher Spinoza suggested an approach to his work: "Not to weep or laugh but to understand."

In April, Farrell was awarded the Emerson-Thoreau Award for 1979.

Quake freak draws on Chinese data

PEKING (WP) — A 24-year-old self-confessed earthquake freak from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has become a catalyst for a solution to a great transpacific riddle — what makes the ground lurch and people die, a subject of great interest in China and North America.

During four months in China, U.S. scientist Lucille Jones has punched a mound of unusual Chinese earthquake data into an American computer to produce a scientific paper slated to be the first such Sino-American effort published.

She has been to three Chinese earthquake sites, looking for answers to the fate of her own fault-threatened California home.

"The great advantage the Chinese have in predicting earthquakes is 9,000 years of records, which they have combed very carefully" looking for events that recur just before large tremors, said Jones. "They don't hav the money to do it any other way." She plans to leave behind a small American-made computer she brought with her for her Chinese colleagues to use.

Jones, who speaks Chinese, is one of the first five American researchers to come here under the new governmental scientific exchange program. The Chinese have given her a warm welcome; earthquake prediction is an area in which they know they have something to teach the Americans.

Earlier in this decade, Jones said, some U.S. scientists said anyone who claimed ability to predict earthquakes "was a quack." When the Chinese did just that at Haicheng in 1975, saving many lives, "it was a slap in our face," she said.

Jones' rapid entrance into China's earthquake-watching community has been aided by her unusual combination of training in geophysics at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where she is working toward her doctorate degree, and her command of Chinese, which she acquired as an undergraduate at Brown University and during a year in Taiwan.

She has been obsessed with earthquakes for a long time.

"The first I hear of a big quake in California, I'm taking the next plane to L.A.," she said.

The Chinese have been able to predict earthquakes not only because of their excellent historical records, but because of enormous manpower they have been able to employ in areas where they suspect tremors are about to occur. Local seismology bureaus look for sudden changes in well-water level, animal behavior and more scientific measurements such as electrical resistance in the soil.

Suspicious measurements in known fault areas lead local officials to set up observation teams, the great strength of the Chinese system. Before an August, 1976, quake in Sichuan (Szechwan) Province, local officials organized 1,200 observation groups. The mass of data coming in led officials to order all residents out of their homes four days before the major shock, up to 7.2 on the Richter scale, hit the area.

"Only 30 people were killed in the area, most very old people who did not believe the prediction and refused to leave their homes," said Jones.

Sometimes, however, like the enormous Tanghshan earthquakes of 1976 that killed a reported 750,000, there are too few clues and the Chinese fail to predict a quake.

"Tangshan occurred on a dippy little fault that nobody paid any attention to," Jones said.

In Sichuan, attention was so intense that seismologists were able to observe personally the fireballs that untrained observers had reported before previous earthquakes.

The scientists concluded the phenomenon was caused by methane gas, released and ignited by underground events leading up to the main tremor.

Before the judge

A 21-year-old man facing a charge of robbery with violence was denied bail Tuesday in provincial court by Judge William Ostler.

Howard Clement Baker, 829 Helmcken, was charged after taxi driver Robert Ernest Cavenaile was robbed last Friday of $103 by a man who held a knife at his throat.

Baker, who is also charged with unlawful confinement and possession of a dangerous weapon, elected trial by judge without jury and a preliminary hearing was set for Tuesday.

Cavenaile was also mentioned in a case involving a 53-year-old woman who pleaded guilty to obtaining transportation by fraud.

Crown counsel Richard Law said Jeannie Elizabeth Barker, 1134 Queens, was picked up by Cavenaile at the Tudor House beer parlor, 533 Admirals, Monday night.

She asked Cavenaile how much it would cost for taxi fare to the Colwood Inn, 1889 Old Island Highway, and was told about $6.

When they arrived, Cavenaile's meter read $5.50 but Barker refused to pay the fare.

Ostler gave her a suspended sentence and three months probation but ordered her to pay the cab fare.

Michael Sean Harkin, 3128 Glasgow, was sentenced for a break-in at 2650 Sooke Road and stealing $160 from an unlocked car.

Law said Harkin had a disagreement and left his home Aug. 4 and stayed two weeks at the Sooke Road address after breaking into the residence, knowing the occupants would be away. When the occupants returned on the evening of Aug. 16, Law said, Harkin ran away after being discovered.

The theft took place Aug. 9 when he entered an unlocked car and took the money from a wallet which was in a purse.

Court was told Harkin was on probation in connection with juvenile convictions for breaking and entering.

"Sometimes when I run away, I get a little hungry," Harkin said when asked for a reason.

"There's no excuse in this country to commit a criminal offence because you're hungry," Ostler replied.

The judge also ordered Harkin to attend the Metchosin farm ranch program which began Sept. 17.

Street musician Windi Earthworm was charged with causing a disturbance Aug. 9 by swearing on Government Street.

Earthworm, who appeared in court the way he is normally dressed while singing and playing his guitar at the northern end of the Causeway — in black blouse and skirt and hair in pigtails — pleaded not guilty and a trial was set for Friday morning.

Terry Harrison, no fixed address, was charged with breaking and entering a residence on Whittier, and unlawful confinement, attempted rape and indecent assault of a young woman.

He was remanded in custody until Friday for a psychiatric examination.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Alfred Charles Atkinson, 59, of 2644 Prior, $500; and Ronald William Conibear, 18, of 644 Latoria Road, $350.

More sponsors for boat people

Immigration has received applications to sponsor 31 more families to the Victoria area. Many of the sponsors are churches or members of church congregations.

And the effort has brought churches closer together. The Roman Catholic, United, and Anglican churches in Sooke have undertaken a joint sponsorship.

Any group of five individuals can sponsor a family. The estimated cost is $12,000 for a year. But sponsoring organizations say it would likely cost half that if volunteer work is included. And the refugees seldom need to be sponsored for a whole year.

The Inter-cultural Association is co-ordinating information about sponsorship. Phone 388-4202.

Church hits heritage tag

The Anglican church will protest inclusion of three of its structures in Saanich's heritage designation.

A spokesman said Tuesday the church disagrees with Saanich's decision the buildings need protection and views the move as an unfair inconvenience.

The spokesman from the Anglican synod office said the heritage designation is superfluous because the church is strongly devoted to the idea of protecting architecture.

Three of 15 buildings selected by Saanich's heritage advisory committee as important heritage sites are churches.

The old municipal hall, now privately owned, is also included in the designation. Council has cancelled a demolition permit taken out by the owner.

Before passing a heritage bylaw Saanich must notify property owners of the impending designation and hold a public meeting.

The Anglican church will make its objections known then, the spokesman said.

It presented a formal protest brief to Victoria recently when the city decided to include nine churches in its heritage designation, but objections were overruled by aldermen.

Heritage committee chairman Doug Franklin told council it's time Saanich followed Victoria's example.

A heritage designation restricts owners from demolishing or altering the exteriors of buildings without council permission.

The church spokesman said congregation shifts make it necessary occasionally to move or close a church. The heritage designation would create difficulties.

"The church is, after all, people rather than buildings."

Churches included in the heritage designation are: St. Luke's on Cedar Hill Crossroad; St. Mark's on Boleskine, and St. Michael's All Angels on West Saanich.

Educational designations are: Cedar Hill elementary school, Craigflower school, Royal Oak elementary, St. Michael's University School, Strawberry Vale school, Tolmie school, and the former normal school, now called the Young Building which is on the Camosun College Lansdowne campus.

Other designations are: Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, Royal Oak Community Hall, The Thatch restaurant (formerly Maltwood museum), and Wilkinson Road jail.

Warrant issued

George Charles Neil

Thomas was accused of possession of a camera worth more than $200 on Nov. 23 knowing it to be stolen property.

Summer night's dream: Watermelon balls and marshmallow flipped on sherbet

Kay Spicer

If summer's warmth has appetites slightly on the wane, you're probably wondering what to feed the family. Tempt them by always having an icy cold dessert for the grand finale of your meals.

There's nothing more delightful on a hot summer's day than an icy cold chunk of watermelon or wedge of cantaloup. Sliced any way you wish, they're the perfect answer to a hunger for sweetness or an unquenchable thirst.

As melons reach their peak of perfection and abundance during warm weather months, it's a good idea to serve them often as possible while they're around.

Other all-time favorite icy treats are, of course, ice cream, sherbets and fruit ices. Make them even more delightful by topping them with fruity toppings. Mix and match combinations. The results are bound to be refreshing and exhilarating.

WATERMELON FLIP

(Makes 4 servings)

1 cup prepared marshmallow whip
1 cup fresh watermelon balls or bite-size chunks
4 scoops lime sherbet

MINTY CANTALOUP CUP

(Makes 6 servings)

⅔ cup sugar
½ cup water
4 large sprigs fresh mint
2 cups ½-inch cubes cantaloup
2 teaspoons lime juice
Vanilla ice cream or raspberry sherbet
Mint sprigs

Boil sugar, water and 4 sprigs mint together for 1 minute. Add cantaloup, cover and bring back to a boil. Boil 30 seconds. Remove from heat, stir in lime juice, cool and chill. Remove mint sprigs and spoon over ice cream or sherbet at serving time. Garnish each serving with a fresh mint sprig.

WATERMELON SORBET

(Makes 6 servings)

4 cups watermelon chunks, firmly packed (seeds removed)
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice, or
2 teaspoons Fruit-Fresh, ascorbic acid mixture
1 small cantaloup
2 teaspoons honey
Watermelon spears

Puree watermelon in blender, food processor or food mill. Freeze in ice cube trays until firm. Break into chunks; blend again in blender or food processor or beat until smooth with an electric mixer.

Cut cantaloupe in half; remove seeds; cut pulp into chunks. Puree in blender or food processor with honey. Serve scoops of sorbet into icy serving dishes, preferably stemmed. Spoon cantaloup puree over each serving. Serve garnished with watermelon spears.

A blender-easy version: bean and bacon potage

Who says bean soup has to simmer all day? This blender-easy version combines two favorites: Cheddar Cheese and baked beans, into a special family treat.

2 slices side bacon
⅓ cup (75 ml) chopped onion
2 chicken bouillon cubes
2 cups (500 ml) boiling water
1 19-oz. (540 ml) can baked beans
1 cup (250 ml) shredded Canadian Cheddar Cheese
¾ teaspoon (3 ml) Worcestershire sauce
Chopped parsley

Cook bacon in a saucepan until crisp; drain well. Crumble and set aside. Saute onion in bacon drippings until tender. Dissolve chicken bouillon cubes in boiling water. Stir into onion in saucepan. Add beans, cheese and Worcestershire sauce. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until cheese melts and soup is heated through. Do not boil.

Transfer mixture to a blender container. Add crumbled bacon. cover and blend until smooth. Serve immediately. Garnish with parsley if desired.

CRUSTY CHEESE POTATO BAKE

You don't even have to peel the potatoes in this flavorful side dish.

After a few minutes of preparation, your oven takes over, making the potato slices tender and saucy, while the cheddar cheese topping bakes crispy and crunchy. For great eye appeal, use white Cheddar.

1½ pounds (750 g) new potatoes.
Salt and Pepper
1 cup (250 ml) shredded old Cheddar Cheese
1 chicken bouillon cube.
1 cup (250 ml) boiling water.

Scrub potatoes; wipe dry. slice unpeeled potatoes into ⅛-inch (3 mm) slices. Spread a single layer of potato slices in a 9-inch round layer cake pan. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Continue layering and seasoning until all potato slices are in the pan. Sprinkle cheese evenly over top. Dissolve chicken bouillon cube in boiling water. Pour over cheese and potatoes.

Place pan over direct heat and heat until liquid comes to a boil. Transfer to a preheated 375 degree F. (190 C) oven. Bake uncovered, 1 hour and 15 minutes or until potatoes are cooked.

Makes six servings.

Recipes for flavor favorites

Peaches and apricots are favorite summer fruits with almost everyone, and certainly with those growing a tree or two in the home garden. Never is the fruit so flavorful as when picked at the moment when it drops readily into the hand as lifted to a horizontal position.

Nutritional values of these two fruits are quite similar.

The greatest difference seems to lie in the level of vitamin A, the apricot being rated at a little more than double the value of an equal weight of raw peach. Iron is equal in both, calcium rated as double in apricot, with potassium nine times higher in apricot, and sodium five times higher in peach. Vitamin C values are rated as equal in both fruits but are not at a high level.

These readings are taken mostly from the B.C. Nutrition Pamphlet Nutrient Value of Some Common Foods; other figures are from various sources.

One set of recipes can be used for both fruits, though the resulting flavors are distinct. Apricots to my taste have a deeper, richer flavor than peaches when fresh and raw.

Unfortunately even the most flavorful fruits lose some of the natural sweetness with any form of cooking heat. But apricots seem to need less sweetening with cooking.

After using many of the fresh fruits uncooked, it is natural to want to cook a few in various kinds of desserts. Pies are a universally-liked dessert. If the shell is made with nutrition in mind, they are an acceptable part of a meal, especially when a light vegetable-salad type of main course precedes the pie.

A Flan is a light textured pie shell made in a Flan Tin (which is a special shape), or in a 9-inch ordinary pie plate, if you build up the surrounding edge well before baking.

PEACH OR APRICOT FLAN

25 mL soft margarine
45 mL brown sugar
2 small eggs
250 Ml unbleached flour
5 mL baking powder
15 mL wheat gern
1 mL salt

Cream margarine with sugar; beat in eggs.

Measure and mix dry ingredients in sifter. Sift into creamed mixture; fold together lightly with wooden spoon.

Lightly grease and flour the Flan Tin or pie plate. Spoon flan mixture into tin, spreading evenly with the spoon, remembering to build up a thick surrounding edge in the surrounding groove of the tin.

Bake in moderate oven 180 deg. C for 25 to 30 minutes, until lightly golden. When cool, turn out on large plate.

Meantime, take about 10 apricots (or 4 or 5 peaches) remove skins by dropping into scalding water then into cold. Cut into halves, remove stones.

For Sauce: Add 125 mL sugar to juice, boil until becoming syrupy.

Mix 5 mL cornstarch with 5 mL cold water; stir into syrup until thickened and clear. Stir in 50 mL soft margarine and set aside to cool a little. When cool, pour into Flan shell.

Arrange apricot (or peach) halves in the sauce. It should come well up around the fruit.

Serve with or without homemade plain yogurt.

Next is a quite different type of Peach or Apricot Pie, one made with a delightful tender crust top and bottom of the finest of yeast bread dough.

This same dough recipe can be used for pizza pie, or as small pastry cases to bake in large muffin pans (or foil pans) with any type of filling — meat and vegetables, blackberries, or savory rice and grated cheese.

YEAST BREAD DOUGH FOR PEACH OR APRICOT PIE

½ cup warm water
1 tsp sugar
1 Tbsp dry yeast (or 1 pkg)
½ cup milk from skim powder
2 Tbsp soft margarine
2 tsp sugar
1 tsp salt
2 small eggs
3 cups (approx) unbleached flour and whole-wheat flour mixed

Measure warm water into large warm mixing bowl. Add 1 tsp sugar and the dry yeast. Stir and let stand for 10 minutes.

Make up skim milk powder with hot water in small bowl. Add margarine, sugar, salt. Stir to dissolve and melt. Add this mixture to yeast mixture. Then beat in eggs with large wooden spoon.

Begin beating in enough mixed flour to make a soft dough. Continue stirring in flour until a soft ball is formed. Smooth up in bowl to gather all pieces of dough and the ball is lightly coated with flour.

Divide into 3 portions. Roll out one portion thinly on lightly floured board to make lower crust. Notice how easily this dough rolls out with no breaking or cracking. Place on lightly greased and floured pie plate. Fill with prepared peaches or apricots (see Fruit Filling below).

Roll out second piece of dough to size for covering and sealing at edges. Make a few gashes in top for steam to escape.

The third piece of dough makes delicious small tarts or pies or a pizza pie if you wish. Dough will keep if closely wrapped, in refrigerator.

To bake the fruit pie, place filled pie in cold oven. Turn heat to about 90 deg.F to begin raising. When about half risen, turn off heat. Leave for complete raising, about 10 or 15 minutes. Then turn heat to 400 deg.F to stop the raising and begin baking.

Place foil lightly over pie to prevent scorching at this point.

After 10 minutes turn heat down to normal pie baking around 300 deg.F to finish baking and cooking the fruit for about 20 minutes longer. Remove foil at this time. When done, remove pie from oven to cool. Fruit Filling for Pie: 5 peaches or 10 apricots.

2 Tbsp sugar
1 tsp lemon juice
1 tsp soft margarine

Scald fruit for 2 minutes, then plunge into cold water. Remove skins and stones. Apricots may have skins left on if they are known to be tender. Drizzle lemon juice over cut fruits; sprinkle with sugar.

Fit top crust over fruit, pinching edges together as described above. Bake as directed.

While tree fruits and berry fruits are available, enjoy some each day. Freeze some for winter use for they seem to keep much of their flavor if processed correctly. It is then possible to get a taste of high summer on a winter day.

FOOD QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Knife leaves stain in head of lettuce

Q. What causes browning around the edges of lettuce or other greens that otherwise look fresh? Should greens be washed before storing in the refrigerator?

A. The browning is what is called rusting and is caused by excess moisture clinging to the leaves of greens. How many times have you opened a nice, green crisp lettuce head and found some soft brown spots in the inner leaves? Moisture has been trapped in these places and longer storing only promotes more rusting.

Another cause of rusting spots is when the leaves are cut or trimmed with a knife prior to storing. If you wish to discard some parts of the vegetable, break off the parts instead of cutting.

Should greens be washed or not before storing? There are varied opinions on this. Many agree that greens keep longer if they are not washed until just before using — that you get better quality (crisper, fresher-tasting) greens when they are washed, drained and trimmed before they are stored.

Lettuce heads and other salad greens can be trimmed, leaves separated if desired, and then rinsed in cold water. Do not allow them to soak. They should be drained well and wrapped in cloth or paper towelling (to prevent rusting), then loosely packed in plastic bags.

Q. I enjoy cooking with beer, but recently there have been a number of light beers introduced. What I would like to know is if using a low-calorie beer will significantly affect the flavor and texture of a beer recipe? Also, where can I find some beer recipes?

A. There is no significant difference between dishes cooked with light low-calorie beer and regular beer. A spokesman for the United States Brewers Association, gave the following explanation: The only difference between these two types of beer is their alcohol content — light beer has lower alcohol content — but alcohol will dissolve and evaporate in any kind of cooking, and both products basically will end up with the same flavor and texture results.

A good tip to remember is to use beer at room temperature in recipes. Pour the beer into a container, let it sit until the foam disappears, then measure for the recipe.

For recipes, you may write for a free 22-page illustrated booklet containing favorite beer recipes to the United States Brewers Association Inc., 1750 K St. N. W., Washington, D.C. 20006; Attention: Food Editor.

Q. What can I do to remove food odors from plastic containers? It was difficult enough to completely remove greasy stains from them but I just can't get rid of the strong odors. Help!

A. This question has been held for some time until one of our readers came to the rescue, suggesting "placing the cleaned container outside in the hot sunshine a few hours . . . it will smell as sweet and clean as new." We haven't tried it, but the suggestion sounds as though it has merit.

Q. Does freezing have any effects on seasonings? I have felt that freezing intensifies herb and spice flavors from my experience with leftover foods that I freeze. Plese tell me if I am right.

A. Different seasonings develop different reactions when frozen. Many herbs, spices and certain foods used for seasonings tend to acquire a stronger flavor upon freezing. Some examples are celery, garlic, green pepper, pepper and cloves.

Curry tends to develop a musty flavor. Salt loses some flavor when frozen so you might consider adding just a little more, particularly in baked goods such as cakes, pies and pastry. As for other foods, seasoning and salt can be adjusted accordingly upon reheating.

LOOK AT THE DIFFERENT WAYS YOU CAN PLAY THE NAME GAME!

THE NAME GAME IS PLAYED LIKE BINGO . . .

But instead of numbers, letters are drawn and published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist. The form is made up from the letters in your name, in accordance with the rules of the game which accompany every form. Below is an example showing nine different ways a form could be made up using the name "John Samuel Anderson". Remember, no nicknames or punctuation. Good Luck!

More than just a sandwich

Peanut butter is one of the lowest cost, most nutritious foods available to consumers today. Two tablespoons of peanut butter to make a sandwich costs as little as 11 cents or even less depending on where purchased and the brand.

Frequently, store specials and certain brands reduce the cost even further. Other protein sandwich fillers cost considerably more.

Nutritionally, peanut butter is an outstanding source of protein and the B vitamins. In addition, it contributes some thiamine and iron. A peanut butter sandwich, teamed with a glass of milk and an orange, or other citrus fruit, makes a balanced meal. The milk and the bread of the sandwich combine with the peanut butter to furnish high quality protein. The citrus fruit fills in the missing vitamins.

More than just a sandwich material, peanut butter is a low-cost addition to any menu from breakfast, lunch, dinner and snacks. Try Peaut Butter Pancakes for breakfast to furnish necessary protein and eliminate the need for expensive breakfast meats.

PEANUT BUTTER PANCAKES

2 cups all purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons baking powder
2 eggs, beaten
¾ cup peanut butter
2 cups milk*
1 tablespoon vegetable oil, preferably peanut oil

Sift together flour, salt, baking powder, and sugar. Gradually stir flour mixture into beaten eggs. Add peanut butter and milk. Beat until smooth.

Oil skillet or griddle. Place over medium heat (350°F. for electric pans) until hot. Pour about ¼ cup batter into heated pan. Turn with a spatula when top of pancake is covered with bubbles and the edges look dry. Brown other side. Serve with butter and syrup. Yield: two dozen pancakes.

* To further reduce cost, use dry milk; follow package directions for making two cups.

SHEER ENERGY

⅓ cup honey
½ cup crunchy peanut butter
½ cup non-fat dry milk

Mix honey and peanut butter in bowl. Stir in non-fat dry milk, a little at a time, until thoroughly blended. Shape into narrow roll. Wrap in waxed paper and chill until firm. Cut into one-inch pieces and wrap in cellophane. Yield: approximately one-half pound.

NOTE: For immediate consumption, shape into balls and roll in chopped peanuts or cereal to eliminate stickiness. Chilling would not be necessary.

PEANUT PARTY BISCUITS

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon soda
¼ cup shortening
¾ cup milk
½ cup finely chopped peanuts

Sift dry ingredients together. Cut in shortening until mixture is crumbly. Add milk and stir until dough follows fork around bowl. Turn out on lightly floured surface. Knead gently six to eight times. Roll out to about ¼-inch thickness. Cut with small biscuit cutter. Bake in a preheated 475°F. oven for about seven to 10 minutes until lightly browned. Serve filled with sandwich fillings such as thinly sliced country ham or deviled ham spread. These may be made ahead, partially cooked and frozen. On the day of the party, remove from freezer, allow to thaw, and finish baking at 450°F.

COLONIAL PEANUT SOUP

2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons grated onion
½ cup celery, thinly sliced
2 tablespoons flour
3 cups chicken broth (bouillion may be used)
½ cup smooth peanut butter
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons chopped roasted peanuts

Melt butter in a saucepan over low heat; add onion and celery. Saute for about five minutes. Add flour and mix until well blended. Stir in chicken broth and allow it to simmer for about 30 minutes. Remove from heat, strain broth. Stir in the peanut butter, salt and lemon juice into the strained broth until well mixed. Serve hot in cups. Garnish each cup with a teaspoon of chopped peanuts. Makes six servings.

Spud ad proves hot potato

WASHINGTON (UPI) — With charges still echoing between the top United States' brewers over the chemical content of each other's beers, now comes a new controversy involving potatoes and stuffing mix and — you guessed it — more chemicals.

The common, ordinary potato, it seems, contains oxalic acid, arsenic, tannins, nitrates and solanine alkaloids — the last being the same substance found in foliage of belladonna, also known as the "deadly nightshade."

That information comes from the American Council on Science and Health, an industry-oriented advocacy group, which has filed a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission.

The complaint concerns an ad sponsored by the Potato Council, which appeared in the August issue of Reader's Digest. It listed the ingredients in a box of stuffing mix — a long list of equally long chemical names — and then compares them to what's inside a potato.

A potato, the ad states, contains only potato.

But stuffing, the ad says — listing the ingredients of a box of chicken-flavored Stovetop mix — contains among other things: sulfur dioxide, calcium propionate, MSG, artificial flavor, BHT, TBHQ and propylgallate, the last three being preservatives.

"A potato is, of course, an excellent, delicious and safe food," said Elizabeth Whalen, head of the council, but the ad is typical of attempts to perpetuate the myth that "only artificial substances have chemicals, while natural ones do not."

"This is not the case," she said. "Potatoes represent a complex aggregate of at least 150 different chemical substances . . . including 24 hydrocarbons, 24 alcohols, 31 carbonyls, 13 organic acids, nine organic bases and 23 sulphur compounds.

"One of the major differences between stuffing and potatoes which is relevant here is that the chemicals in stuffing have been tested, evaluated and regulated. The chemicals in potato have not," she said.

Whalen added that American consumers are "particularly fearful and suspicious of chemical compounds in our general environment. The ad only serves to strengthen this fear . . ."

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Blubber can be beaten, N.Y. style

By ENID NEMY

NEW YORK (NYT) — The best time to diet is spring, because summer follows spring and summer means bathing suits. Or summer, fall or winter for assorted other reasons.

Take your choice. It doesn't matter a bit. The talkers are always waiting for a season that never comes, and the serious usually diet because their moment of truth coincides with a surge of will power. The season rarely enters into it.

What often does enter into such a decision is whether the will power is sufficient to hack it at home. If it isn't, the next step is finding the time to get away and a place that won't slim the bank account even more than the body.

Three of the most reasonably priced are within a two-hour drive of New York City; one in Englewood Cliffs, N.J., and the other two at Neversink and Hyde Park, N.Y.

The Englewood Cliffs Spa for women is operated by Dr. Murray Pozner and his wife, Sandra, who acts as administrator.

It is particularly popular with women who want diet supervision and relaxation, but are not amenable to strict rules of discipline. Life at the spa is somewhat like that in a large unstructured family, with complete informality.

Other than offering only nutritionally sound, attractive meals, limited to 700 and 1,000 calories daily, the spa has no rules. There are, if one wishes them, exercise classes and a 30-minute daily massage, which are included in the price. There is a swimming pool for recreation and water exercises, and there are behavior modification sessions and consultations with Betty Sonders, a former Martha Graham dancer who lost 110 pounds.

"Eating is not good or bad," Mrs. Sonders tells the women. "It's either sensible or not sensible, but diet has to be a life commitment."

The spa can accommodate 70 guests in the main house and annex, and weekly rates range from $195 to $260 for double occupancy and $255 to $310 for single rooms. Dormitory accommodation is $180 a week. The spa also does a brisk business with organizations, which are offered a group discount and whose members come for the day or a weekend.

It's a whole different world at Neversink, N.Y., where Elza and Graeme Graydon advocate holistic health (the concept of integrated care for the body, mind and soul) at their 155-acre, beautifully landscaped New Age Health Farm.

Mrs. Graydon, who was born in Austria and who formerly ran a spa in Suffern, N.Y., that was often referred to as Esalen East, believes not only in fasting, but in taking enemas while fasting. There is a daily water enema, and, in addition, three times a week, a coffee enema. Guests are notified in bold print, that anyone on a fasting program who stays longer than three days and refuses to take an enema is "asked politely to leave." The water enema is said to eliminate waste from the colon; the coffee enema is said to stimulate the liver, "a storehouse for toxins."

"It's dangerous to fast without an enema," Mrs. Graydon said. "Toxins are not released properly and go back into the bloodstream. We like to cleanse a person by detoxification. It's more important than weight loss. If you feel good on all levels, you're more courageous, more loving and better with stress. Our fasts are a feeling of joy."

Although there are strict rules about enemas, daily weigh-ins and attendance at orientation lectures if one is fasting, almost everything else at the farm is done on a voluntary basis.

Weekly rates range from $185 to $235 per person double occupancy and $277 to $352 single occupancy.

Pawling Health Manor at Hyde Park states unequivocally in its brochure that it is not a milk farm, spa, luxury resort or maximum-service hotel. It bills itself as a clean and attractive professional weight-reducing retreat, and its regimen is as uncomplicated as its claims.

The health manor, a large house with several annexes in attractive surroundings, was started 20 years ago by Dr. Robert Gross, who now acts as consultant, and his wife, Joy. In that time, more than 25,000 men and women have enrolled for the minimum one-week stay.

Dr. and Mrs. Gross agree with the Graydons as to the efficacy of fasting, but they do not advocate enemas. Their guests fast on water, and there is water, water everywhere one turns, at bedsides, in hallways and even outdoors. Most of the clients remain on the water fast for five days before graduating to juice, salad and cottage cheese, but many return to their fasting after a short break.

The Grosses believe that complete rest is an important ingredient of their program, and complete rest means no pool. But there are makeup classes and lectures, games such as backgammon and Scrabble, sunbathing and television. There are also gymnasium facilities.

Rates start at $175 a week per person in rooms containing two and three beds and for small single rooms with a connecting bathroom. Motel units are $196 for double occupancy and $334 for single.

Surprises: buckwheat waffles

Economical and easy-to-prepare waffles made with buckwheat pancake mix turn into sumptuous "surprise" treats when you add cooked, crumbled bacon or chopped raw apples.

Buckwheat Waffles

1 cup milk
1 egg
3 tablespoons melted or liquid shortening
6 strips cooked bacon, crumbled.*
1 cup buckwheat pancake mix.

Place milk, egg, shortening and bacon in shaker or bowl. (If melted shortening is used, add after buckwheat pancake mix). Add buckwheat pancake mix; shake vigorously 10 times or beat with rotary beater until batter is well blended. Bake in a hot waffle baker until steaming stops. Serve with butter and maple-blended syrup. Makes three servings.

* Note: ½ cup chopped raw apples can be used in place of bacon.

Win by a whisker? Nicha's family really hopes so

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — By all but the strictest legal standards, Nicha has a chance to be a very "fat cat" indeed.

But a deputy state attorney-general says a cat can't legally win the lottery. So Nicha's legal partner, 15-year-old Andrea Ruiz, really has a chance to win $50,000 a year for the next 20 years.

Lottery officials say they were contacting the finalists this week when Miss Ruiz told them the other half of "Nicha R. and Andy Ruiz" was a cat.

Dear Abby
by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: After two unsuccessful marriages in six years, I have finally met someone with whom I am very much in love and know I could be happy.

He is from a socially prominent and well-to-do family. I have never told him about my previous marriages since both were short-lived, each lasting less than a year.

His family wants to have a gala wedding with all the frills, including my wearing my grandmother's wedding gown. There is nothing I would like more than to have this very special wedding, but what kind of wedding may a divorced woman have under the circumstances?

Is it necessary that I discuss my previous mistakes?

KEEPING MY MOUTH SHUT

DEAR KEEPING: Times have changed and so have the rules about what kind of wedding a divorced woman may have. However, the rules of honest and aboveboard conduct remain the same; if you continue to keep your mouth shut about your two "mistakes," you will have made a third.

DEAR ABBY: What would you say if a guy you were dating rang you up and said, "Hey, if I asked you to marry me last night, forget it. I must have been bombed."

RUTHIE

DEAR RUTHIE: I'd have replied, "If I said 'yes', forget it. I must have been crazy."

DEAR ABBY: My husband is in the hospital and will be there for about three more weeks. Although he is restricted to bed, there are some things he is still capable of.

We are practically newlyweds and, as he does have a private room, we feel that what we do behind closed doors is our business. But it seems that the nurses want to run our lives. Every time we are alone they find some excuse to come in and interrupt us. We used to be embarrassed, but now we are just plain mad! We spoke to the supervisor, who said it was a hospital room, not a hotel room. For $98 a day, we disagree. What do you think?

FRUSTRATED

DEAR FRUSTRATED: I think if prisoners in some states are permitted "conjugal visits," hospital patients who are physically able should be allowed the same. Talk to your husband's doctor. He could issue "doctor's orders." Lotsa luck.

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of nine boys. Their father is dead. Rudy, 23, is my oldest. He married Agnes, a 15-year-old girl, because she said he got her pregnant. Their baby is two now and is the picture of the fellow Agnes went with before Rudy married her.

Their marriage is on the rocks because she is pregnant by a sailor she met when she went to visit her mother in Seattle. Rudy won't take her back because he's in love with a 21-year-old girl who has two babies and is expecting a third by a fellow who isn't her husband although she's still married.

Rudy gets unemployment. He runs all night and lies around my house all day. He acts real crazy. I never know if he's on drugs or just drunk. Alright so much for Rudy.

Jody is my 20-year-old. He got a 17-year-old girl pregnant but won't marry her because he says he's not ready to settle down yet.

Abby, I've been a church-going Christian woman and a good mother and I don't know how I could have turned out kids like these. If they hang around the younger boys, they will be a mess, too. Please help me.

MOTHER WHO FAILED

DEAR MOTHER: Don't feel guilty. If you've been a good mother, you haven't failed, your kids have. Let the older boys know they can't lie around your house all day. Your problems are too heavy to carry alone. You need to talk to an understanding, supportive person. Your clergyman is ready when you are.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DEPRESSED: Don't sit around feeling sorry for yourself. If nobody calls you — call someone. Get out of the house and find someone who needs a lift more than you do. You won't have to look far.

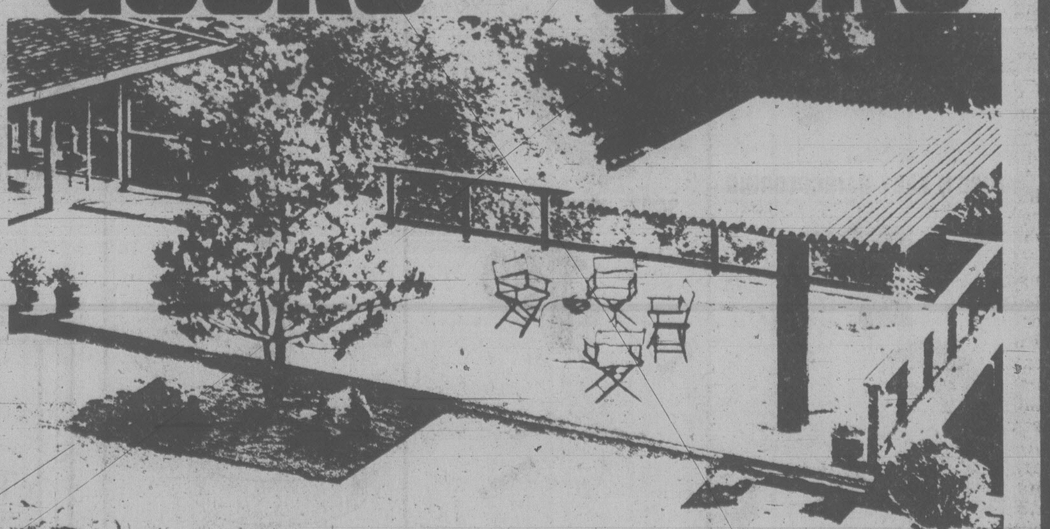
decks decks



Have you got a deck to deck? All you need is a brush and Decadex.

Decadex is a water-based, brush-on seamless weatherproofing — that means you can easily do it yourself and save a lot of money. There's no need for expensive labour, specialized equipment and dangerous solvents.

Decadex covers old neoprene, old wood, new wood, metal flashing, concrete or just about anything you may now have on your deck.

Decadex is available with a non-slip finish and a range of colors to bring your deck to life.

Decadex is sold in over 100 countries of the world, fighting the oceans' salty spray, extreme temperatures and weather conditions, grease, chemicals, oil, and much more abuse than you can give it. No fading, peeling, cracking or chipping . . . even under the toughest conditions.

And even with all this going for it, Decadex is still one of the least expensive coatings on the market today.

Use Decadex and relax.

Zinc factor in infertility?

An interesting approach to the problem of male infertility has recently been released by Dr. Ali A. Abdasi from the Allan Park Veterans Administration in Michigan. He had found that a mild deficiency of zinc can, in some instances, be responsible for male infertility.

One of his colleagues, Dr. A. S. Prasad, has been studying the effects of zinc deprivation among Egyptians and Iranians. In the course of his work in the Middle East, this idea of replenishing zinc occurred to him.

Using 240 mg. of zinc sulfate daily for six months markedly increased the sperm count in the men they were studying.

Ongoing research is concentrated on repairing both an inadequate number of sperm and weakened sperm. The problem is being attacked from many angles. It is believed that zinc may yet be an important in returning sterlity to some men.

Diabetes in children presents many special problems. Wide swings in the level of blood sugar in children complicate diabetic control.

At Yale University Medical School, Dr. William V. Tamborlane and his co-workers reported that with a portable pump they were better able to control blood-sugar levels in children. The device pours out round the clock doses of insulin through a needle inserted through the skin.

The device being tested is now being used in patients who are in the hospital. It is believed, however, that before long juvenile diabetes may be treated in this way, even when they are living on the outside.

The doctors refer to the pump as an artificial pancreas which can stabilize and control blood sugar levels. At the present time, the needle beneath the skin is left in place for a maximum of two weeks.

It is believed that this approach opens up a great many avenues to benefit the childhood diabetic.

The problem of middle ear infections plagues young children, especially those with large and infected adenoids. Dr. P. Helena Makels, of Helsinki, has studied the problem of middle ear infection (titis media) and has found that one of the pneumococcus germs may be the culprit in causing this problem.

She and her fellow researchers are using a special type of pneumococcal vaccine to prevent such repeated infections,

The Finnish health authorities are so encouraged by the early reports of the vaccine they have given Dr. Makels permission to vaccinate a large group of children who have a repeated history of ear infections

At Harvard University, Dr. Jerome O. Klein is carrying on a similar investigation in the United States, to see if the vaccine is as promising as it is reported to be.

Herbs pose health risk

By KEVIN McKEAN

NEW YORK (AP) — "It was an impulse," Beverly Dixon says, that started her brief but memorable foray into the world of herbs.

Strolling through a shopping mall in Madison, Wis., she stopped at a store and picked up a package of herb tea. It was a ground powder of the pokeweed plant, a common North American weed. Mrs. Dixon brewed a cup that evening.

An hour-and-a-half later, Mrs. Dixon began to vomit. She was doubled over with cramps and pain.

"I didn't know what to think except that she drank the tea and I didn't," says her husband, Thomas Dixon. "I called the poison control centre and they looked it up in the book and said, 'Yes, that's poison. Get her into a hospital.' "

Doctors at the intensive care unit of University Hospital pumped her stomach and gave her intravenous fluid to replace lost blood.

The manufacturer says Mrs. Dixon was the only person to get sick during the year the ground pokeweed powder was on the market. But the Wisconsin department of agriculture, trade and consumer protection banned sale of the powder in February.

Mrs. Dixon had become one of a small but growing number of people who accidentally poison themselves by eating herbs in ignorance of their potential harm.

Some of these people pick the wrong wild green for a salad. Others, like Mrs. Dixon, buy teas, powders, oils or extracts at stores.

Herbs escape careful scrutiny by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration because they are rarely labelled as drugs. Yet many herbs contain ingredients the FDA would require a prescription for, or might ban, if they were sold as drugs. Some herbal books and magazines tout them as remedies for everything from the common cold to cancer.

Trade groups concede it's hard to police the quality of herbs because of mislabelling or adulteration with other products.

While the majority of people who have a cup of herb tea don't suffer any ill effects, doctors and botanists caution that uninformed use of herbs can be dangerous.

"I would say that it's chemical roulette," says Ara Der Marderosian, a botanical pharmacologist at the University of Pennsylvania.

Opening lead — six of spades.

As the play progresses and declarer learns more about how the the cards are divided, he can frequently use this knowledge to make a contract that might otherwise be lost.

Here is a typical case where West leads a spade against three notrump. The outcome seems very promising after South wins the spade lead with the ten, since all that declarer now needs is either the normal 3-2 division in diamonds or a 3-3 club break. If either suit is favorably divided, South automatically acquires his ninth trick.

But when declarer plays th ace of diamonds at trick two, East unexpectedly shows out; and when declarer next cashes the A-K-Q of clubs, West shows out on the third round, discarding a diamond.

For one long moment it seems that South has bitten off more than he can chew and that there is no way of making a ninth trick. Nevertheless, if he keeps a cool head, South eventually concludes that three notrump is still ice-cold.

He already knows that West started with exactly five diamonds and two clubs. South also knows — or can at least deduce — that West, for his one spade bid, must have either five or six spades.

Accordingly, declarer plays a heart to dummy's ace. When West follows suit with the queen, it is then reasonable for South to conclude that West's original distribution was 5-1-5-2.

The rest of the play is easy enough. Declarer leads the jack of spades from dummy, allowing West to cash his A-K-9-3. However, West must then lead a diamond from the J-10-8 — with dummy holding the Q-9-5 and South the K-7-2.

Regardless of which diamond West chooses to return, South makes three more diamond tricks and the contract. That's all there is to it.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

WORDY GURDY

BY TRICKY RICKY KANE

Every answer is a rhyming pair of words (like FAT CAT and DOUBLE TROUBLE), and they will fit in the letter squares. The number after the definition tells you how many syllables in each word. To win $10, send your original rhymes with your definitions to this newspaper. All entries become the property of UFS, Inc.

1. Numbers game in a Nevada city (2)
2. Wild cat from Arizona (2)
3. Hot dish from Pennsylvania (2)
4. Fabric from Missouri (2)
5. Asthmatic from Wyoming (2)
6. Violent windstorm in SW Texas (3)
7. Explosive missile from Ohio (3)

Thanks and $10 to Virginia Singler of E. Northport, NY for # 5. Send your entry to this newspaper.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, August 23
by SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Moderate but steady pace achieves goal. Know it and proceed accordingly. Aquarius, Scorpio, Taurus persons play key roles in your scenario. Accent on employment, dependents, pets and nutrition. One who shares work interest could also become a valuable ally.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Exciting relationship is likely to be featured. Express yourself, imprint style, welcome change and challenge. Emotions tend to dominate — strive to give logic equal time. Member of opposite sex inspires you to obtain needed material. Gemini, Virgo natives figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on home, basic security, adjustment in lifestyle. Be diplomatic, especially when dealing with family members. There is talk of remodelling and a possible change of residence. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives might play key roles.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Relative may have grandiose plans, but solid substance could be lacking. Know it and respond accordingly. Check sources, define terms and avoid self-deception. Pisces, Virgo individuals figure prominently. Be aware of calls, correspondence and appointments.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be confident, accept challenge and added responsibility. Chances for success are enhanced as authority figure lends valuable support. Money and love are in picture. Cycle is such that you emerge a popular victor.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can strike chord of universal appeal. People are drawn to you and many confide their problems and aspirations. You could win popularity contest. Accent on personality, special appearances and direct appeals. Highlight initiative, independence and originality.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You "upset the odds." What appeared a losing cause boomerangs in your favor. You can be more independent in thought, action. Take initiative. Lead rather than follow — you are going to make a marvellous contact. Love could bloom!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spotlight on friendship, fulfillment of desires and success which comes as result of following your hunch. The number 11 figures prominently. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius natives play roles in scenario. Conservative family member has right idea concerning investment.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Series of circumstances could lead to added prestige, promotion. Elements of timing and luck ride with you. Effort that failed twice could succeed on third try. Gemini, Sagittarius individuals help activate scenario.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Moon aspect coincides now with travel, educational project, ability to clear emotional debris. You'll understand! Look beyond the immediate — become more aware of potential, especially where educational project, publishing are concerned.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Complications need not equate with defeat. Know it and take heart. Cycle is on upswing. Check financial resources of those who make "fantastic" claims. Be analytical: find reasons for statements, events. Dig beneath surface. By so doing, you could strike pay dirt.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Avoid co-signing — if cautious, you "survive." Accent on people who want something for nothing — from you. Maintain low profile. Be diplomatic, but firm. Change occurs on homefront. One whose ideas oppose your own does not feel personal animosity.

IF AUGUST 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are perceptive, analytical, vibrant and attractive to the opposite sex. You arrouse excitement and envy. You are never satisfied merely to know something happened — you want to know why it occurred. You gladly enter fight when cause is right. Your sense of justice is sharply-honed. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. You are capable of expressing yourself verbally and through written words. Social life accelerates in September and you could also travel. You will be "bathed" in charisma.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J.A.H. HUNTER

"This is for Dellers," said Harry, handing his wife a cheque. "I made it out for more than their bill, so you will have to get change.

Clare smiled. "Fine. That saves a trip to the bank. What do we owe them?'

"Figure it out for yourself." Harry chuckled. "The bill is mineteen dollars more than the change you'll get. If I'd made the cheque double what it is, and if the bill were two-thirds its amount, the change would be four times as much.'

He's like that! What was the amount of the bill?

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: GOAL was 1083 (odd).

308 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere appreciation and heartfelt thanks to all our dear relatives, friends and neighbours for the love and support given us during our recent bereavement in the loss of our beloved son and brother David. The floral tributes, cards, baked goods, and complete meals sent to us were appreciated beyond words. Our special thanks to all the young people who attended the funeral and came to our home to lend their support. - The Shillington Family.

Mrs. Joy Druery wishes to express her deep thanks and appreciation to Dr. Harris, Dr. Kilshaw, the nurses and staff at the Victoria General Hospital. Their family Doctor, D. H. Purdon, Rev. Henry Silvester and the members of the Royal Canadian Legion, Prince Edward Branch No. 91 and all her friends who have been so kind during the recent loss of her beloved husband, Thomas Alexander Druery.

309 IN MEMORIAM

KARAGIANIS — IN LOVING memory of my husband and Father John Karagianis who passed away August 22, 1971.

God saw you getting tired,
So he took you home to rest,
God's garden must be beautiful,
For he only takes the best.
If tears could build a stairway and heart aches make a lane,
We'd walk the path to Heaven
And bring you home again.

—Always remembered and sadly missed by wife Margaret and daughter Linda.

MOSS - In loving memory of our only brother, Lloyd Robert, who passed away suddenly August 22, 1977.

We do not need a special day
To bring you to our minds
The days we do not think of you
Are impossible to find.

Very sadly missed by his sisters, Sherry, Betty and brother-in-law Leo.

MOSS - In loving memory of Lloyd Robert who passed away August 22, 1977.

Just a thought of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory sad and true,
Just the love and sweet devotion
Of one who thinks of you.

Grandmother

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

309 IN MEMORIAM

MOSS - In loving memory of our only son, Lloyd Robert, who passed away suddenly August 22, 1977.

To some, dear son, you are just a memory
To others, a part of the past
But we who loved you in life, sincerely
Will love you as long as our lives shall last
There is no parting from those we love
No distance can divide
For each day in memory's garden
We still walk side by side
Wherever life may take us
Whatever we may do
The memory of the years we shared
Will keep us close to you.

Very sadly missed by Dad and Mom

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He leadeth me beside the still waters
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Fading summer treasures

GARDENING

Hilda Beastall

The appearance of the first pinky-mauve Colchicums overnight at the weekend, and a group of exquisite blossoms of fall Cyclamens reminded us that summer as she fades never fails to leave us treasures for the next season.

I have known those who scorn the lovely Colchicum autumnale, calling it just an overblown crocus with "great cabbagy leaves" in spring.

Look at your own blooms now if you have it already in the garden or in a balcony tub. Assess its value to you not only for its appearance but for its continuing interest.

Imagine the tip of that delicately structured blossom forcing its way through soil which is usually left to bake in summer to ripen the large bulbs. Quite unblemished and totally perfect, the new flower grows bigger each day until ready to expand in soft sunshine. It will then close each night and on dull days, thus giving a long period of loveliness. For further interest, tag the first few blooms as they emerge to discover for yourself how long the individuals last.

From one large bulb as big as a full size duck egg, there may be five or more blooms emerge in succession in the one season. With a half dozen bulbs just planted, even this week you can come across a bloom or two, for the flowers have been formed within the bulb during spring and summer in preparation for this moment in late summer.

Roots form on Colchicum bulbs after the flowers fade and from then until early spring are busily making leaf growth. Just before tulips come up, the dark green of Colchicum leaves can be seen at soil level. They grow enormously throughout spring to 10 or 12 inch length and five to six inch width. By mid June they become limp and yellow having finished their work in renewing the bulb and probably producing a few offsets. The dried leaves may then be cut off.

Colchicum belongs in the lily family and is a bulb not a corm, as it would be if it were a crocus, as it is too often called. Other common names attached to this lovely and interesting plant are "Naked Lady" and "Naked Boy" because of the absence of leaves while flowering.

Other Colchicums are available if you track them down and are prepared for the prices attached to scarce treasures. "The Giant" is a fine lavender bloom as large as the goblet of a Darwin tulip. "Water Lily" is a shorter, smaller flower with many petals almost flat on the ground. These are best seen when wide open.

Two striking beauties are a single white named Colchicum speciosum album and another of a splendid wine color whose name I cannot recall nor trace in locally produced catalogues. The garden where these two were growing is still very clear in my mind though no Colchicums are now visible from the street.

A note of warning regarding the Colchicum bulbs when not in the ground — keep them out of reach of children. They contain highly potent medicinal juices, even as do many of our garden plants not intended as human food.

Look around your garden if it is new to you but planted a few years ago by another owner.

There may already be some of these fall beauties to introduce you to another turn of the cycle of life. Keep fully aware of this miracle of renewal. You need never despair just because summer is waning and fall is on the way.

2 more bids for voting list

Municipal voters who fail to register before the Aug. 31 deadline for this year's election rolls have two more chances to get their names down before the November civic votes.

Officials admitted today that a large advertisement carried in weekend papers was slightly misleading in saying people cannot vote unless registered by 5 p.m. Aug. 31.

It omitted any mention of the court of revision Sept. 30 and spot registrations election day.

Jim Craven, municipal administrator in Oak Bay, said the ad was taken out jointly by Greater Victoria municipalities in an effort to get as many names as possible on the rolls well in advance of polling day.

A voter who meets all the statutory qualifications but who happens to be away from the city until polling day can fill out a registration card at the polling place, although that adds to the administrative burden and may cause delay.

"We want as many people as possible on the list," Craven said. "You can imagine what would happen if a lot of people turned up to register on election day."

And some citizens would not get to vote because they lacked some vital proof of qualification and wouldn't have time to go home for it, Craven suggested.

To avoid last-minute disputes or inconvenience, municipal clerks are anxious to get their voter lists updated now.

A joint meeting of Greater Victoria municipal returning officers and the Chamber of Commerce is set for 7:30 a.m. Sept. 12 at the Strathcona Hotel to discuss methods of encouraging a large turnout at the polls.

Will they never learn?

TORONTO (CP) — A judgment made by a county court judge Monday when he said that a woman convicted of stealing $4,000 from her employer was acting out of character because she was in menopause was called "weird" Tuesday by the chairman of the Ontario Status of Women Council.

Lynne Gordon, participating on a panel during Women's Day at the Canadian National Exhibition, said of Judge Hugh Locke's decision to give Shirley Kirk, 49, a suspended sentence and two years probation that "some men never do learn."

Saltsman revives his 'Canada South' dream

OTTAWA (CP) — Max Saltsman is reviving his vision of a "Canada South" in the Caribbean, helped by reports the tiny island of Nevis is interested in links with Canada.

Saltsman, a former MP and now chairman of the Committee for an Independent Canada, said in an interview he thinks a Canadian island in the sun would stem the flow of tourist dollars out of this country and help national unity.

"The more attractive and the more exciting you can make your country, the less likely it is that people will want to break away," he said.

But the government is treating the idea gingerly. One reason is that Simeon Daniel, a Nevis political leader, did not raise the idea of political ties in talks with Canadian diplomats in Barbados late last week.

Daniel sparked Saltsman's interest with a comment more than a week ago that his Nevis Reformation Party would like "arrangements with a meaningful power." Nevis wanted to end its association with the nearby island of St. Kitts and was interested in Canada or the United States.

He met Allan Roger, Canadian high commissioner to Barbados, last Thursday but Roger said "no form of political association was proposed or discussed." They did talk about Canadian aid in the Caribbean and Daniel mentioned the Nevis dispute with St. Kitts.

Saltsman said he will ask the Committee for an Independent Canada to take a stand on a Canadian island in the Caribbean.

This is an old dream of Saltsman's. When he was New Democratic MP for the Ontario riding of Waterloo, he urged the government in 1974 to look at chances of a union with the small Turks and Caicos Islands in the Caribbean. The idea was rejected.

Nevis is an island of only 15,000 people off the coast of Puerto Rico. Once a British colony, it now is joined with St. Kitts in a federation with local autonomy. Britain retains responsibility for foreign affairs and defence.

Daniel's party holds the only two Nevis seats in the nine-man legislature.

Saltsman, once the NDP finance critic, said Canadians seeking the sun are travelling and retiring in growing numbers to Caribbean and southern U.S. spots. That hurts the Canadian economy.

"It is quite clear that this is the pattern of the future and that it will become worse and worse."

Nothing could change the Canadian desire to find sun in the midst of cold Canadian winters.

"So, from the economic point of view, there is a great deal to gain from having a Canada South and keeping your currency in your country," Saltsman said.

But government officials are cautious. They note Mitchell Sharp, then external affairs minister, turned down the Turks and Caicos proposal in 1974 even though islanders indicated they would like to join Canada.

They say other countries, particularly in the Third World, would level charges of colonialism at Ottawa if Nevis joined Canada. There would be resentment in the Caribbean if Nevis grew richer than its neighbors because of its Canadian ties.

Sharp said in 1974 that taking over the Turks and Caicos islands would create numerous defence and tariff problems and would be "destabilizing" in the region.

Saltsman said taking in Nevis would be no more colonial than accepting Newfoundland in Confederation 30 years ago. But he acknowledged there would be a fuss — "we would be condemned by the United Nations for it."

Canada could not take any steps, however, unless the people of Nevis wanted union.

Uranium deal in the works

BERNE (Reuter) — Canada is ready to resume supplies of uranium to Switzerland if it is allowed to veto certain Swiss exports of nuclear technology to other countries, a government spokesman said Tuesday.

The draft agreement to end a two-year-old Canadian uranium embargo against Switzerland will go before the Swiss cabinet for approval in the near future, a foreign ministry spokesman added.

Under the agreement Canada would proceed with the sale of 800 tonnes of uranium to three Swiss nuclear power stations as soon as the cabinet agrees to give Ottawa the final word on Swiss nuclear exports involving Canadian equipment or technology.

But the Lausanne newspaper Tribune-Le-Matin said it is by no means certain that the cabinet would accept the Canadian demands and might either delay its decision or try to obtain more uranium from other countries.

Canada halted the uranium shipments, representing about one-sixth of Swiss requirements, in 1977 after Switzerland failed to renegotiate a supply agreement.

The Canadian government has been trying to prevent any military use of its uranium or nuclear assistance by other countries since India exploded a nuclear device with the use of Canadian-supplied technology in 1974.

Last June the seven-man Swiss cabinet said in a written parliamentary reply that any long-term uranium embargo would jeopardize electricity supplies in Switzerland, where three nuclear power stations already operate and a fourth is ready to begin production.

Running for record

HONOLULU (UPI) — Everything is running smoothly aboard the combat store ship USS San Jose, including the crew.

They've been running since Aug. 8 and are trying to set a new world record for continuous relay running. They started when the ship left Oakland, Calif., bound for Subic Bay Naval Base in the Philippines, and the baton has been moving ever since.

The current record for a continous relay run is more than 6,000 miles set in Norway in 1977 by a group of 1,600, according to the Guinness Book of World Records.

JCB backhoe loaders work like money machines

The JCB backhoe loader can do just about any job you want it to - and do it well. Owners call it the 'money machine' because it will pay for itself in no time. It's one of the most versatile construction machines available.

You name it, JCB can do it. It digs, loads, backfills, dozes, rips, lifts - even has a self-contained roadbreaker. Thanks to the widest range of attachments and options in the industry, the JCB backhoe loader doesn't know when to quit.

Standard production features include high-capacity front bucket; two-position dipper; independent stabilizers; and outstanding operator comfort and convenience in a full-vision cab. JCB's unique 'hydraslide' sideshift lets you position the backhoe precisely across the rear frame so you can dig up close against walls, curbs and fences.

Add JCB's versatility to its heavy duty components and rugged integral steel frame that's built to absorb the stresses usually placed on engine and transmission, and you've got a backhoe loader that really means business. Profitable business.

Call your Finning sales representative today and ask to see the JCB money machine. It's a sound investment.

Charred trail of destruction

Police said the man, apparently drunk, stole a car from a service station lot, backing into the station's gas pumps as he did it. The pumps were spilled over and burst into flame, igniting the car's gas tank.

As the man drove off in the car, rear-end ablaze, the fire at the gas pumps devoured the station's overhead canopy over the pumps.

The man lost control of the car after he had left the downtown area and sheered off a fire hydrant, police said. Water gushing from the hydrant put out the blaze in the car's gas tank.

After colliding with a light standard, the man was thrown through the car's windshield, staggered away, got into another car and drove off, police said.

Balloon launch a bust

GIMLI, Man. (CP) — A $15,000 National Research Council experiment turned into an expensive failure this week when a helium-filled balloon burst.

The massive $12,000 balloon, containing $3,000 worth of helium gas, rose several hundred metres and then fell back to the ground.

"It looked like a defect of the balloon," said one council employee. " One of the lower panels appeared to go."

The balloon was to carry instruments to study the ozone layer and the makeup of the earth's outer atmosphere.

Projects officer Barry Wetter said the accident, while costly, probably did the most damage to the morale of the crew.

Meet Belle of the wilderness

GIMLI, Man. (CP) — The story of Belle the Dalmation ended happily over the weekend when the dog was reunited with her owner after a 55-day-ordeal in the Manitoba bush.

Belle's owner recognized a picture of the dog that appeared Saturday in a Winnipeg newspaper, after the animal's rescue from a bare rock island in Lake Winnipeg.

"I was so happy, I was shaking," said Mariette Dotremont, of St. Pierre-Jolys, who lost her pet June 21, while rock climbing with a friend about 80 kilometres from where the animal was found.

Belle didn't die, and instead travelled through dense bush and over stretches of water to the tiny island where she was spotted and rescued by the Lake Winnipeg coast guard.

A crewman on the boat that found Belle said she was very hungry.

Dow plant a time bomb?

EDMONTON (CP) — Dow Chemical officials have declined comments on reports describing their petrochemical plant in nearby Fort Saskatchewan as a time bomb, releasing potential cancer-causing chemicals into the air.

Dr. Jack von Borstel, a genetics expert at the University of Alberta, said vinyl chloride and vinyl chloride monomer produced at the plant have found to be contributing to higher incidence of cancer in rats, and pollutants from the plant could endanger workers and area residents.

Murray Trask, manager of the plant, said Monday he did not wish to comment on von Borstel's opinion through the news media but will be meeting with him to discuss the matter.

Saskatchewan ups fowl limit

SASKATOON (CP) — The provincial government has raised the daily bag limit for Saskatchewan duck hunters to eight this year from six last year, reflecting good water and nesting conditions.

Duck hunters will be allowed to have 16 birds in their possession this year.

Duck hunters are estimated to have bagged 320,000 mallards within the province. With the higher limit, more hunters and birds are expected.

Waterfowl hunting season opens Sept. 1, with a weeklong sandhill crane season in the area of Last Mountain Lake and the traditional northern duck hunting open. A second sandhill crane season, from Sept. 17 to 22 will be held in an area along the South Ssaskatchewan River.

Hobby turns into a roaring success

He started his company, Adams Performance Products Ltd., with $100 five years ago. Now it is a $500,000-a-year business.

Adams, a motorcycle racer, wholesales high-performance motorcycle engine parts and makes and sells custom-made engines and bike accessories.

The 32-year-old is the Canadian distributor for R. C. Engineering of California. About 60 per cent of his business goes through the warehouse to 350 dealers across Canada. The retail shop in Edmonton accounts for the remaining 40 per cent.

On display in his retail store is the reason for his success: magazine articles featuring record-breaking drag bikes Adams either raced or helped design and build.

Russ Collins, founder of R. C. Engineering, set the world's record in one of these bikes. His success as a leading parts distributor came soon after. His line of custom parts for modified Honda engines are in demand throughout the world.

Adams started racing for Collins in 1969, breaking the North American record with the first custom Honda four-cylinder engine built that year. Adams also broke the National Hot Rod Association's top-gas world records in Atco, N.J., in 1974 and 1975.

"Collins also started his business with $100, in 1969," Adams said. Today, Collins's company is an $8-million-a-year business.

Adams said he is trying to improve his own drag bike that already gets "more horsepower to the pound than the R. C. Engineering dragster because of an Adams Performance designed super-charger."

He thinks Alberta is the best place in Canada for the business.

"We're on the upswing with high performance bikes now, the way cars were eight to 10 years ago."

He said Alberta, with eight per cent of the population has 17 per cent of the motorcycles.

His five mechanics are kept busy building $1,500 to $3,000 custom engines. His orders are usually backed up for two months.

Adams said he hopes to enter the final trials later this year in Ontario, Calif., the largest motorcycle drag championship in the world.

Police unit shows 'we care'

EDMONTON (CP) — City police have established a crime-victim services unit to help theft victims get property back, Chief Robert Lunney said.

"The victim is often the forgotten person in a crime and we're helping fill this gap with the criminal justice system," he said.

The unit, funded by a $480,000 municipal grant, will concentrate on assisting victims of housebreakings and storebreakings during its first year of operation.

In the next three years the unit will probably be expanded to handle victims of major crimes, including rape and assault, said unit leader Sgt. Ed. Payuk.

"We want to instill a sense that the police do care and, in the long term, create a trust between the police and the public," he said.

Edmonton ponders year 2020

EDMONTON (CP) — A city report says existing forms of government in the Edmonton metropolitan area will be unable to cope with massive urban growth expected by the year 2020.

The report is the first in a series of technical documents on an annexation proposal by the city.

The city, seeking room for growth and improved planning, wants to annex 1,982 square kilometres, including the communities of St. Albert and Sherwood Park. The bid will go before a provincial hearing this fall.

BACK TO SCHOOL SAFETY DAYS Aug. 23-25

For the ninth consecutive year, Hillside Shopping Centre hosts Back to School Safety Days in Victoria. The Victoria City Police will be there to answer questions and remind shoppers of how important it is to practice safety on the road, in the home and in their every day living. Also represented this year are the RCMP, the Capital Region Safety Council, the Victoria Fire Department, the B.C. Ambulance Service and School District 61.

Piracy big, brutal business

By KEYES BEECH
Los Angeles Times

BANGKOK — Well-armed and merciless, pirates are flourishing on the seas of Southeast Asia. And while Vietnamese boat people know it best, piracy has become a gantlet that is feared by all seafarers here.

Nobody knows how many Vietnamese refugees have died at the hands of Thai pirates. Often there are no survivors. But the number runs into the hundreds, perhaps thousands.

If the refugees are lucky, they escape with being robbed or raped. At worst, they drown when their boats are sunk. Pirate attacks on refugee boats have become so common that officials have coined a grim new phrase to categorize the reports: "R and P" — rape and pillage.

The rate of piracy has risen in proportion to the number of refugee boats leaving Vietnam. Earlier this year, when the exodus from Vietnam reached its peak, attacks on refugee boats also reached an all-time high.

Lured by stories — often true — that the refugees are carrying gold, the pirates cruise the sea lanes in search of prey. One pirate crew was arrested by Thai police when they tried to sell $150,000 worth of gold bars to a local trader.

Not all the pirates operating in these island-dotted tropical waters are Thai — Cambodian, Malay and Burmese raiders also are active — and not all their victims are Vietnamese boat people.

Thai police point out that the Thais themselves are the chief victims of Thai pirates. They also draw a sharp distinction between professional and part-time pirates.

"Most Thai pirates are simply fishermen preying on other fishermen," a marine police official said. There are, however, organized pirate gangs that have made piracy a big and profitable business.

During a six-month period last year one such gang, operating from Elephant Island in Trat Province on the Gulf of Thailand near the Thai-Cambodian border, captured 26 fishing boats and killed 450 fishermen.

Bangkok sent three top officiers, one a police colonel, to investigate the pirate ring. They secretly borded a fishing trawler posing as fishermen.

Around midnight a much larger vessel loomed out of the darkness intent on ramming the trawler. The police opened fire with M-16 rifles.

The pirate craft responded by raking the trawler with 50-caliber machine-gun fire and ramming it. The policemen were killed but three members of the crew survived to testify against the pirate leader.

"We learned then why these pirates always killed everybody in sight," a police officer said. "The leader was a respected and influential man who owned a grocery store, a filling station and sold supplies to local fishermen. He couldnt' afford to be recognized."

The Thai pirates have the reputation of pitiless killers. Fishermen seldom resist because they know resistance will be met with death. One pirate was known to have killed 26 men.

Most of the pirate boats are converted fishing trawlers with powerful engines. Often their crews are more than a match for marine police. They are armed with weapons ranging from the U.S.-made M-16 rifle to grenade launchers, recoilless rifles, 57-mm. cannon and mounted 50-caliber machine guns.

"The professional pirates are like wolves," said the managing director of a Thai company operating 100 fishing boats. "They circle around until they find a target of opportunity."

The pirates usually wait until a fishing boat has completed its catch, then board it, shoot the crew, sell the fish at the port and take the boat away to sell the engine and other equipment.

"Sometimes they will hold the boat and crew for ransom," said the fishing company executive, who preferred to remain anonymous. "Usually they don't ask for much — maybe 50,000 baht ($2,500), so we pay it. We've paid ransom on one boat five times in two years."

The company's larger boats, 100 tons each, are equipped with radar and armed with machine guns. "The pirates never bother them," the executive said.

Asked why he does not arm all his boats, he replied: "Because if you give them all guns they may turn pirate. We had a case where the chief engineer of one of our boats turned pirate and killed the captain and eight members of the crew."

Thailand, it should be noted, has one of the highest homicide rates in the world.

Thai pirates are nothing if not daring. One pirate crew captured a 300-ton ship with a 1,200-horsepower engine two years ago and it has not been seen since. Police believe it was sold in Cambodia or Malaysia.

The Chao Phya River, which links the port of Bangkok with the sea, has been a fertile field of operations for the bolder pirates who don't hesitate to attack foreign freighters.

The river pirates usually operate from fast boats built to skim the water at 30 knots. One such craft recently sneaked up on a coastal tanker carrying half a million litres of diesel fuel.

Some of the pirates boarded the tanker and tied up the crew, while others transferred 7,000 litres of fuel to other boats.

"They were running up and down the river selling the fuel to anybody who would buy it," a marine policeman said.

Policemen say they get little co-operation from fishermen who are the chief victims of the pirates. "The fishermen are like your Mafia," a police official said. "They don't talk. Either they have something to hide or they are afraid of reprisals."

"There is nothing new about piracy in the Gulf of Thailand," a fishing fleet operator said. "The jungle has its tigers and the sea its pirates. It's something we live with."

Tourists gasp at U.K. prices

By SHERRI BARRON

LONDON (CP) — Tourists continue to flinch against the vicious bite of Britain's rising prices which could well jeopardize the country's title as the "highest earning tourist industry in Europe."

Twelve million visitors last year swelled the industry's total to more than three billion, but there has been a seven-per-cent drop so far this year.

Visitors are not happy with soaring hotel and restaurant prices, reducing the wallet to pancake thickness while the British tourist authority seeks to strengthen its advertising campaign to brighten a dismal portrait.

London hotels have left tourists gasping as they dig deeper into pocketbooks to meet hotel costs exceeding those in New York, Paris, Amsterdam and Bonn.

Double-room accommodations for one night are making tourists wince. The Holiday Inn, Marble Arch, charges $59 plus breakfast of $3.50 a person; Royal Lancaster charges $46 with breakfast at $3.55 each; Sheraton Park Tower costs $70.15, plus breakfast of $4.50; and the London Hilton is $66, plus breakfast of $3.50.

A Sheraton Park Tower spokesman said prices have risen in "leaps and bounds in the last 18 months" but charges are still not in keeping with inflation.

The Kensington Palace says:

"We have a noticeable decrease in the number of North Americans staying here this year. Those who do are spending less in the bars and restaurants. They tell us our double-room overnight charges ($93 Canadian) are daylight robbery."

The weakening of both the Canadian and American dollars against the pound, inflation and sales-tax are prime targets for these high prices, a BTA spokesman says.

The BTA remains optimistic.

"Seven per cent is not a nightmare slump in Britain's tourist trade. If we were 10 per cent down by the end of the year we would still be up on our figures of three years ago."

He says he expects last year's three billion to be surpassed by another 500 million this year.

Microsurgery a medical revolution

New York Times

NEW YORK — Peering through a stereoscopic microscope at 20-power magnification, Dr. Yale L. Fisher watched a tiny scalpel, smaller than a sewing needle, enter his own field of vision.

The scalpel had pierced the white of the eye at an angle and now the blade appeared behind the patient's lens. Dr. Fisher, an ophthalmologist, guided the scalpel to the back of the eye until the blade touched a scar on the surface of the retina, which is an extension of the brain.

The microscope was suspended from the ceiling. By focusing the zoom lenses with his feet, Dr. Fisher's hands were free to manoeuver the scalpel, tiny tweezers and other fine instruments to peel off a thin layer of cells that scarred the innermost layer of the retina. The area affected in this case was responsible for the central reading vision and was just a few millimeters wide.

The operating room at the Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital was hushed. Dr. Fisher's heart was racing. The operation, which would restore the man's sight, required extraordinary delicacy. It was one that doctors had not considered possible less than four years ago.

Microsurgery, which is any operation done with the aid of loupes or microscopes, has benefited millions of people. Newer applications are creating a medical revolution that is having an impact on virtually every area of surgery.

Ophthalmologists have long used the microscope to work in the front portion of the eye to remove cataracts, transplant corneas and do other operations. Dr. Fisher is among those surgeons who are further expanding the frontiers of microsurgery by working in the back of the eye. New operations have been devised to repair damage to the retina, to correct glaucoma, a potentially blinding disease, and remove foreign bodies with the aid of strong magnets or microtweezers.

Microsurgery has made headlines in recent months as surgeons have reimplanted arms, legs, thumbs, scalps and other parts severed in accidents. These accomplishments, which were only dreams to the most imaginative ancient physicians, are now possible because microsurgeons can routinely connect arteries and veins as small as one millimeter in diameter, and repair the internal segments of nerves.

But many other impressive advances involving less dramatic circumstances have been made in microsurgery in recent years as a result of the combined interest of younger surgeons and the development of key pieces of technology that affect the diagnosis and treatment of disease.

Microsurgery is helping to prevent strokes, cope with various types of cancer, aid people injured in accidents, correct birth defects, help paraplegics, restore vision and hearing, reduce attacks of dizziness, help people have babies, remove some kidney stones, correct damage from inept surgery, and even treat elephantiasis, among other conditions, according to scientific articles, interviews with leaders in the field and observation of microsurgery.

Some microsurgery operations take less than an hour, others more than 16 hours. To do them, microsurgeons often depend on sutures that are just a fraction of the thickness of a human hair.

Microsurgery's technique has given surgeons greater precision than is possible with the unaided eye. It is allowing them to operate more precisely on large structures and to attack tiny ones that could not hitherto be approached without causing serious damage to adjacent tissues.

But microsurgery is not needed for every operation. Traditional techniques are still in use. Each surgical specialty applies microsurgical techniques in its own way. Use of the fine sutures has more importance to ophthalmologists and surgeons working on blood vessels than to those who operate on ears, for example.

Plastic surgeons are using microsurgery to transfer large pieces of skin from one area of the body to another to help repair damage caused by birth defects, accidents, burns and other conditions. In the past, such transfers often required several operations over the course of months during which time the patient had to remain with an arm sutured to the head, the legs tied together, or in some other awkward position.

Now, surgeons often make the repair in just one operation lasting several hours. It is called a free flap transfer, and the success results from re-attachment of the small artery and vein of the skin flap to the recipient blood vessels in its new location.

In other applications affecting cancer rehabilitation, microsurgery has helped surgeons fashion breasts after mastectomies and use pieces of rib and skin to reconstruct the lower jaw. Orthopedic surgeons have transferred pieces of bone from healthy areas to others that were destroyed by infection or tumor. Also, surgeons have taken pieces of bowel and put them in the chest to create a new gullet for people affected by cancer of the esophagus.

Exam seller sentenced

ATHENS (AP) — An education ministry official has been sentenced to 8½ years in prison for selling high school examinations. Twenty-one others convicted in the case were sentenced to between five and two years in prison.

The official, George Rammos, secretary-general to the school examinations committee, was the main defendant in the mass trial.

After the case was made public in June, 85,000 Greek high school students were forced to take a new round of year-end examinations which determine their advancement to upper classes.

Pauline's perils pale against politician's wife

TORONTO (CP) — Michele Landsberg, wife of the former NDP leader in Ontario, says the perils of Pauline in the movie serial were nothing compared with the plight of the political wife.

Ms. Landsberg, whose husband, Stephen Lewis, served as leader for the Ontario NDP from 1970 to 1977, said she was lucky because she was already a reporter when she married.

"Doggedly, I stuck to my own work, my own byline, my own unvarnished, hard-won identity," she said in a recent column in the Star.

"But it wasn't always easy, and that's why I wince emphatically when a political wife goofs up or the press snipes."

She said political wives can't win.

"Her job is an anachronism, a non-job, a muddle of conflicting demands and ambiguous rewards. No one elects her and no one pays her."

Ms. Landsberg quipped: "About 100 years ago my husband, Stephen Lewis, was provincial Opposition leader and I was a leader's wife.

"I realized how seductively easy it would be to conform to all the expected stereotypes and to ride my husband's coat-tails."

Canada may soon have its first Jewish municipality

MONTREAL (CP) — If the average Canadian knows little about the Hasidim, it's partly because members of the small, ultra-conservative Jewish sect want it that way.

It's not in the interests of the Hasidim to be exposed to other people, says Hasidic Rabbi Robert Monheit, who like other male members of the community wears a long bears and black hat and suit.

But it's hard not to be influenced by the secular world, he adds.

"You can't constantly be in an environment that has different values and not be influenced."

Despite its low profile, the sect came into the news in July after one of three Hasidic groups in the Montreal area applied to establish its own municipality in the suburbs to which it moved in 1963.

The community of 400 Tash Hasidic Jews owns 106 acres at Boisbriand, and if townspeople agree to the separate town, the local member of the Quebec national assembly will present the request to the government this fall in a private member's bill.

Several Jewish municipalities exist in the United States, but Boisbriand, Que., would be the first in Canada.

By becoming a municipality, the community would be able to set its own bylaws, such as ensuring that Saturday is observed as the Sabbath. Sect members feel this would protect them against assimilation.

To them, assimilation means a hollow existence, one divorced from God. It would leave them in limbo the way they picture non-Hasidim to be.

The Hasidim, who make up about 5,000 of the 100,000 Jews living in the Montreal area, trace their religious practices back to a rabbi born in Poland around 1700.

"Being Hasidic means being a good Jew in every respect — in sleeping, in eating, in praying, in studying and friendship," says Monheit.

The average Hasidic boy attends school for about 10 hours a day during the week and five hours on Sunday morning.

He heads for a private government-funded school soon after 7 a.m. during the school year, in time to arrive for a mandatory prayer session at 7:30. He already has prayed before and after breakfast.

At 8 a.m. religious studies begin. He studies the Torah (the first five books of the Old Testament), the Jewish laws and customs detailed in the Talmud, and the Hebrew and Yiddish languages.

Three hours after lunch are devoted to secular studies. This is the minimum required by the Quebec education department to qualify for a government subsidy.

The community controls the secular courses. Teachers are asked not to teach Darwin's theory of evolution, sex, or anything that could question Hasidic beliefs. Books are censured.

"We don't want a mix of ideas," said Monheit. "We want a pure education."

Girls get less education than boys, and are segregated in their own school building.

The goal of Hasidic education is to turn all males into rabbis, or as close to rabbis as possible. Girls are taught how to run a proper orthodox Jewish household — to keep the sabbath, to prepare kosher food and to observe religious holidays.

Every aspect of Hasidic life is determined by passages in the Torah and the Talmud. Thus, survival of the Hasidic way of life requires the young to be minutely familiar with these religious writings.

Men reign in the synagogue; women in the home. But they don't mingle unless they are married. Sexual contact is restricted to certain times of the month, and they do not use contraceptives.

Rabbi Hersh Feigelstock, principal of the Rabbihical College of Canada, a Hasidic school, says he recommends that his graduates not attend a secular university because it causes them to question their religious practices.

"We have a law that we must live by," says Feigelstock. "And we can't constantly be in an environment that has different values and not be influenced.

"If universities were just teaching subjects, that would be fine. But the atmosphere of not accepting any authority, any path, that's dangerous."

76-year-old Canadian gets Brazil's phones humming

By ESTELLE DORAIS

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence McGuire got the Brazilian telephone companies to change their philosophy on telephone systems and the South American government recently decorated him for it with a whacking big medal.

McGuire, 76, has travelled seven times to Brazil since 1971 under the auspices of Canadian Executive Service Overseas (CESO).

"I gradually went through all the major telephone companies in Brazil and wound up with TELEBRAS, the equivalent of AT and T, with control over everything," the impeccably-groomed, white-haired expert said in a recent interview.

CESO is a volunteer organization established 11 years ago with the Canadian International Development Agency by a group of Canadian executives. Through it retired executives share their expertise with developing nations.

McGuire's field is the technical organization telephone networks. He developed the expertise by working more than 40 years for Bell Canada.

During his last eight years with the telephone company, he served as Canadian representative to the International Telecommunications Union, an experience he said was the best of his career.

"The odd thing was, I got along better with the Europeans than with the North Americans," he said of his experience with the union, which pre-dates the United Nations, although it now is a UN special agency.

That experience was beneficial in aiding the Brazilians, who developed their telephone system on the European model.

Because telephone systems were set up in Europe after social development there was completed, one basic premise was that the population of a given village would not double within 10 years.

That static philosophy, adopted by countries which adopted European telephone technology, was causing problems in areas where population growth is far from being under control.

"What I twigged to was that this philosophy was no good for them," McGuire said. "They had to change it and they're starting to now."

Pointing with pride at the medal which makes him an officer of the Cruziero do Sul (Order of the Southern Cross), he said: "I'm happy with the medal because this is the best proof that someone listened to me."

McGuire is now converting Costa Ricans to his way of thinking. He's been to that Central America country twice in the last two years and expects to return in the fall "because we've started something there and I'd like to see it finished."

His volunteer status with an independent organization means countries see him as a disinterested party, an essential condition before he gets a hearing, he said.

But he got on the nerves of consultants — even the consulting arm of his former company — who saw him as an unfair competitor because he is a volunteer, .

"There are all sorts of consultants who will do anything for money," he said. "I had a lot of trouble with the Bell consulting group who used to raise hell because they said I was doing something and they didn't like it. But I was doing something different because I was talking in broad generalities."

Another problem in the developing countries is the thirst for the best, most modern, automated equipment even though what they really need is labor-intensive systems, he said.

And lenders, such as the World Bank, encourage this trend: "You know, those people wouldn't give them the money for the primitive equipment.

The place is not some oil-rich sheikdom in the Middle East, but rather a tiny dot of land in the South Pacific called Nauru.

The entire 28-square-kilometre island just below the equator can be viewed at a glance through an aircraft window. Its grey-white beaches fringed with coconut palms look out on thousands of miles of empty ocean.

Only an occasional breeze cools the blistering heat. The island has one paved road, no industry, no rivers, and the irregular rainfall and sandy soil make any kind of farming impossible.

Despite the harsh environment, the 7,500 residents, well-fed and living in modern houses, lead a life that would be the envy of most outsiders.

Nearly every family has a car. There is no unemployment, no taxes, schools are free and the government pays for all medical care, even bearing the cost of overseas travel for specialist treatment.

Apart from its beaches, Nauru is virtually a solid mound of phosphate, the residue of generations of bird droppings that is made into fertilizer for crops.

Mining of the deposits, much in demand by a hungry world, generates about $20,000 a year for every man, woman and child on Nauru, island government sources says.

The cash, of course, does not go directly to the islanders, but the equivalent per capital gross national product for the United Arab Emirates is $14,500, the United States $7,800 and Britain $4,200, say the most recent World Bank figures.

The Nauru government took over the lucrative mining operation when the island became independent from Britain in 1968, and present estimates say the deposits will last for 20 more years.

The phosphate is mined from a central plateau that covers most of the island, rising gently from the beaches. A short drive along a dusty track, and the palm trees suddenly give way to the eerie, lunar-like landscape of the digging.

The island's labor force is too small to meet the demands of the mines, and most of the phosphate workers are recruited from other Pacific islands and Hong Kong.

The Nauruans themselves are employed in the government service or public utilities, such as the telephone system and construction.

The island imports everything from toothpaste to bulldozers. The government, led by President Hammer Derouburt for most of the 11 years of independence, runs a shipping line and an airline.

Crash kills 44

NAIROBI (AP) — At least 44 persons were killed in a multi-vehicle crash near the Rift Valley farming town of Nakuru, about 160 kilometres northwest of Nairobi, police reported Monday. The accident occured Saturday night.

Fisherman finds bomb

NAGASAKI, Japan (Reuter) — A fisherman found a Second World War depth bomb near this southern Japanese city where 10 huge oil tankers were anchored, police said. Explosives experts found that the bomb, caught in a fishing net in Tachibana Bay, contained about 550 pounds of explosives. Local fishermen say they believe many depth bombs and mines, dumped by the imperial navy at the end of the war, remain on the bay's seabed.

Ustinov to live his fantasy

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — It's an unusual aspiration to want to play Shakespeare's King Lear at the age of 15. It's even more odd to harbor the dream for 43 years.

But Peter Ustinov is a most unique individual, and when he opens as Lear on Oct. 3, he will be marking another milestone in an outstanding artistic career.

He has directed operas in London and Hamburg and written, directed and frequently starred in such plays as The Love of Four Colonels, Romanoff and Juliet and The Unknown Soldier.

His films include Quo Vadis, Spartacus, and Death on the Nile. He has won two Oscars and three Emmys, as well as considerable acclaim for his work with the United Nations Children's Fund.

He eagerly approaches his up-coming Lear, a play, as has been suggested, that requires "the higher mathematics of acting."

"We're setting it in the 1850s," he said in an interview. "It's a military play. He (Lear) has to have that bearing, that arrogance."

And, superficially, Ustinov appears to have that bearing, the very image of the British pukka colonial — more British in his ways than a 12th-generation earl.

One can imagine his short, soft, stocky figure in deepest where-ever, gin-and-tonic in hand, muttering over something he's reading in an old edition of The Times, his suit rumpled by the heat he barely notices.

Yet, he feels his Russian blood, to which he frequently refers, allows him to see something in Lear that others might miss — some humor.

"With this play one should never be very far from the humorous," he said. "And for this reason, we live in an era now where the two important literary traditions — the American and Russian — don't recognize the difference between tragedy and comedy because they are both too young. Lear must walk that knife's edge.

"I never had a desire to play Hamlet and I always felt I knew Lear. Russian youths are always surrounded by elderly people, so I've had many Lears around me in my life."

Though born in London, the 58-year-old Ustinov said during a recent television program from Leningrad, "I have it on good authority that I was conceived here."

That ancestral combination, and a life in the arts, has left him with the sort of sophistication and popularity as a raconteur that keeps him in demand for appearances and guest-spots on television talk shows.

Bing's daughter arrives

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — She is the late Bing Crosby's only daughter, a fact which Mary Crosby — she's dropped her middle name, Frances — will live with all the days of her life.

She's also a beautiful young woman of 19 and an individual quite unlike her famous singing father and her actress mother, Kathryn.

Mary bears a faint physical resemblance to her parents. She's an exuberant, animated girl, determined to establish herself as an actress in her own right.

She's off to a good start with a regular role in the popular CBS dramatic series, Dallas, after a couple of years in small roles on episodic TV and one flop series, Brothers and Sisters.

She nibbled at a salad the other day in the MGM commissary during a lunch break in production and chattered about her role as Kristin Shepard.

"It's an actress' delight," she said. "Kristin is a real bitch. She seduces her brother-in-law. She's conniving, ambitious and strong. It's great not to be playing the All-American girl.

"I've been preparing for a break like this since I was a little girl. I like doing drama instead of comedy and I'm learning from the rest of the cast."

Mary says she learned little about the techniques of acting from her parents. But she credits them both with giving her the freedom to perfect her craft.

"My mother and father taught me professionalism and discipline," she said. "I watched them and discovered how to be a pro. They never missed a rehearsal and they were always prepared.

"Dad was a natural actor and I would hope I am, too. I learned honesty and simplicity from him.

"The Crosby name hasn't helped or hurt my career. I came to Hollywood with a good agent who got me interviews and I did the rest.

who is acting in repertory in England, and Nathanial, 17, a scratch handicap golfer who runs the annual Bing Crosby golf tournament.

Except for Gary, she hardly knows Bing's first family of sons, her half-brothers Philip, Dennis and Lindsay.

"I'm leading my own exciting life with my wonderful husband," she said.

Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission

Public Notice

The Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission announces the calendar of the Public Hearings it proposes to hold during the months of September, October and November 1979, February and March 1980 and May and June 1980.

In accordance with its Rules of Procedure, before each Public Hearing, the Commission publishes a notice of the applications which are to be considered. Such notices indicate the place, date and time of the hearing, summarize the Rules of Procedure for Public Hearings and indicate where the applications, interventions and relevant documentation may be examined.

The Commission will continue to take advantage of its Public Hearings to provide residents of the regions where the hearings are held with an opportunity to speak on any matter of local or regional interest within the Commission's jurisdiction. Groups and individuals wishing to participate in this way are invited to appear before the Commission the day before the Public Hearing is to begin. Written notice of intent to appear and a summary of the proposed remarks must be received 24 hours in advance.

Charlie Coll's no friend of flies

HILDEN, N.S. (CP) — To many of those who hates mosquitos, black flies, tse tse flies and anything else that flies and bites, Charlie Coll is a familiar face.

His portrait has appeared on every bottle of Muskol insect repellent that he has produced for the last 22 years.

Coll used to mix up the repellent by hand in his basement, but now operates a new plant in this northeastern Nova Scotia community. The plant employs 28 persons and uses automated pourers.

"Muskol insect repellent is second to none in the world," Coll boasts, a claim that he can back up with the testimony of people who have used the product in some of the most insect infested parts of the world.

Coll began by experimenting with chemistry while working for a perfume company.

Although insect repellents and perfumes may seem miles apart, "some ingredients of fly dope of the time, like citronella, were also used in perfumes," he says.

Coll's first experience with bad bug country came when he worked in the mining region of Northern Ontario.

"One fellow I knew had to go to the hospital because of badly infected insect bites," he recalls.

After Coll returned to Truro, N.S., he began work on scents for use by deerhunters to disguise the human spoor and on a fish paste to attract fish. He still sells a deer scent and a fish paste.

Coll's formula is a closely guarded secret, but he will reveal what sets it apart from the competition.

He says it's the amount of Dietylmetaouamide that he puts into Muskol.

"Muskol has specific ingredients for specific species of flies," he says. "I even adjusted the formula slightly that is produced in Australia for a certain fly peculiar to the Outback there."

Coll has received letters from all over the world attesting to the potency of the repellent.

"A teacher in a town north of Cochrane, Ont., wrote and said her kids could finally get out of the school at recess during bug season.

"A group of American and Canadian scientists were studying fish on a tributary of the Amazon, and the only way the American scientists could go out at night to catch the fish was to borrow the Muskol of the Canadian scientists," he says.

Coll, along with his two sons and general manager Doug Simms, is in the midst of a marketing expansion that may make Muskol even more widely known that at present.

He says the repellent really began to catch on after it was distributed in Northern Ontario and many Americans on fishing trips picked it up.

Back to hardware for former mayor of Prince George

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The biggest booster of this booming central British Columbia city sits in a tiny office in his family's hardware store and tells how happy he is not to have the job of selling the city's virtues to the world.

After 10 years of leading council meetings, of endless sessions with government officials, land developers and irate citizens fighting city hall, Harold Moffat gladly stepped down as mayor last year.

Ironically, an issue for which Moffat is best known for in B.C., a condemning television series on land development here, may give him more publicity than did his years in the mayor's seat.

Moffat has filed a defamation suit against BC TV, charging that the television network was wrong in suggesting he profited by his job.

For the time being, however, Moffat is enjoying a different pace. What he misses least, he says, are the countless appearances at tea parties, rallies and fundraising dinners sponsored by service clubs, ladies clubs, church groups and others who demand dignitaries to add importance to their affairs.

"I got tired of coming home and changing every night and going out to put in another appearance," he says with a weary look. "I could no longer do it justice."

Anti-Zionism mounts in Russia

MOSCOW (Reuter) — As Soviet Jews leave for Israel and the West in unprecedented numbers, the Kremlin is intensifying a campaign of anti-Zionist propaganda which is causing alarm in Moscow's Jewish community.

Renewed attacks on Judaism and calls for vigilance among the people this month have followed a series of publications over the last year purporting to expose an international Zionist conspiracy directed against the Communist world.

Zionism has long been a target of Soviet propaganda, but Jews here say they are worried by the virulence of the attacks and new elements which echo anti-Semitic campaigns in Russia's czarist and Stalinist past.

In the latest official commentary, the foreign affairs weekly Novdye Vremya says Soviet Jews wanting to go to Israel had succumbed to Zionist pressure.

The article, by historian Grigory Dakhshleiger, also scorns the notion of a world Jewish "people" and says history and science had proved that there was no such person as a "pure Jew."

There are more than two million Soviet citizens registered as Jews. Under the country's identity card system, all citizens must carry an internal passport which bears their "nationality."

Since the Kremlin eased its emigration restrictions in the early 1970s, more than 200,000 are estimated to have left. A record 25,000 were allowed to leave in the first six months of this year.

Jewish activists say more than 100,000 applications are outstanding and they maintain that many people are deterred from applying because there is no way of knowing if they will receive permission.

They also say that applicants also usually lose their jobs or places at universities and suffer other forms of harassment.

Soviet officials strenuously reject charges that attacks on Zionism can be construed as anti-Semitic.

They point out that racism is banned under Soviet law and that Jews may worship in synagogues and that there is even a Jewish "autonomous republic" in the Soviet Far East.

The dissident activists complain, however, that Jews who attempt to retain their Jewish identity suffer from official harassment. They say there are no available courses in Hebrew in the Soviet Union and that Jews suffer discrimination in employment and education.

One Moscow mathematician recently gave Western correspondents a breakdown of admissions to the prestigious mathematics faculty at Moscow State University which he said demonstrated clear discrimination against Jews.

One explanation given for this is that the number of highly qualified Jews applying to emigrate is so great that universities are reluctant to select candidates who may eventually leave the country.

Japan has its Hell's Angels

By IKUO ANAI

TOKYO (Reuter) — The Bosozoku, a Japanese version of the Hell's Angels bikers, are being given a rough time by a determined police force.

For about 10 years, members of the Bosozoku have spent weekends dressed in anything from leather jackets to imitation Second World War kamikaze pilot suits, defying police, ignoring road signs and fighting just for the sake of it.

But a police crackdown earlier this year had almost instant results. The number of Bosozoku group outings on powerful motorcycles and cars has declined by more than 50 per cent.

The reason is twofold: a big increase in the number of police deployed at strategic road points, and a revised law calling for the suspension of licences, and possible jail terms and fines for endangering other drivers by riding abrest.

At present, there are an estimated 22,500 Bosozoku members belonging to about groups, which operate under such names as Black Emperor, Killer Association and Zero.

The National Police Agency, which assigns about 16,000 officers to anti-Bosozoku duties each weekend, has been trying to isolate the groups from the public, as it did successfully with left-wing etreet fighters in the late 1960s.

During weekdays, Bosozoku members work in either small factories or shops, or go to school. But the normal Bosozoku weekend pattern is for anything from 10 to 100 members, accompanied by some girls, to roar several abreast through tollgates without paying and around mainly suburban roads.

Between last December and the end of June, the licences of nearly 500 Bosozoku members were suspended.

Also in that six-month period, police detained 5,800 Bosozoku members for violating other traffic laws and charged 400 others for acts of violence, mainly with police and between gangs.

Although there have been many clahses between rival Bosozoku groups, often involving steel pipes and sometimes gasoline bombs, no deaths have been reported in gang fights.

However, last March a university student was stoned, beaten with sticks, strangled to death and thrown off a bridge by Bosozoku members.

Police said later that five men, mainly in their teens, had been arrested in connection with the death.

The increased number of criminal cases, including assaults, coincides with a rise in juvenile delinquency in Japan.

Eaton's consumer tips

What you should know about appliances

Range: 'self-clean vs continuous clean'
A self-cleaning oven uses a system that raises the temperature in the oven to between 800 degrees and 1000 degrees F. This incinerates baked-on foods and heavy grime. When the oven has cooled down, the residue wipes off easily with a damp cloth.
A continuous clean oven is one which has a special porous finish on the oven interior liner. This finish tends to absorb and spread oven soils in a way that promotes oxidation at normal oven temperatures, making it easier to clean.

Refrigerators: 'Types of defrosting systems'
There are three types of defrost systems: manual, partial and automatic.
The manual system means you must defrost the entire unit manually at periodic intervals. The partial defrost system takes care of the refrigerator section automatically, but the freezer section must be defrosted by hand. The automatic defrost system defrosts the freezer and refrigerator sections.

Dishwashers: 'Wash cycles'
Dishwashers are usually available with two to eight cycles. Three cycles is usually sufficient for everyday family needs. Cycles available include short wash, normal wash (approx. 1 hour in duration), pots and pans cycles, rinse and hold cycles, sanitizer and plate warmer cycles, and cycles for china or crystal. Extra cycles, while being convenient, tend to add to the cost of the machine.

Carbon copy of Quebec not for N.B.'s Acadians

By DON CAYO

CARAQUET, N.B. (CP) — After 375 years of settlement in the Maritimes, many Acadians feel that the French-speaking communities that remain have finally won a basic fight for survival and now can set their sights on higher economic, political and cultural goals.

"We are still pretty much concerned with the basics, but we have won control of some key institutions — the church, schools and, to an extent, economics through our credit unions," says Leon Theriault, a history professor at the French-language University of Moncton.

Theriault, a member of the Parti Acadien which advocates the splitting of New Brunswick into separate French- and English-speaking provinces, said in an interview that politics is the one area where Acadians have no institutions that they can control.

Although Acadians form the majority in most of the towns and villages in the northeastern New Brunswick, English-speaking people outnumber those who speak French two-to-one in the whole province of 650,000.

"I do not necessarily believe that we have to have an Acadian province," said Theriault. "But I believe we have to have a territory of some kind. For example, we must preserve the Acadian characteristic of the Acadian peninsula."

The northeastern New Brunswick peninsula, which includes this fishing and ship-building town of 3,500, is one of the few areas that remain almost entirely French. It has preserved most of the traditions of l'Acadie, the old French name for a territory which once included all of the Maritimes.

Acadians still speak of l'Acadie, but in a modern-day context it has shrunk to an imprecisely defined area that roughly includes most of New Brunswick lying north of a diagonal line from Moncton in the southeast to Madawaska County in the northwest.

Clarence LeBreton, chief curator at a recreated early Acadian village near here, said he also sees the Acadian people moving in a new direction, but the direction is cultural as well as political.

He said that Acadians, who trace their Atlantic Canada roots back to 1604 when Samuel de Champlain founded the first French settlement in North America, went through a major renaissance in the late 1800s with a series of national conventions that united Acadians from all regions.

"That was a survival renaissance . . to try to get the tools, the devices and the institutions to survive as a community," LeBreton said.

A second renaissance has been slowly building since 1960, he said, with much improved education now offered in French and with the development of French-language newspapers, radio and television and a dramatic upsurge in Acadian music and literature.

"Acadians have never been asked what they want," Theriault said.

"We don't always agree but we are moving closer."

LeBreton said that strong feelings of Acadian nationalism have been stirred by political events in Quebec, but Acadia aspirations are not a carbon copy of changes sought by the Quebecois.

"We are both a French-speaking people, but we have always been different," he said.

Therialut said that not only do Quebecois and Acadians have different aspirations but more significantly they also must deal differently with their approach to government.

Beef's downward trend 'finished'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Beef bargains are finished and prices will begin to climb as the market continues to stabilize, industry spokesmen in Manitoba said Tuesday.

"Any downward trend is finished for sure," said Tom Ellison, an adviser to the Manitoba Cattle Producers' Association.

However, price increases may not be as rapid in Winnipeg as in other Canadian centres, he added.

Earlier this month, beef prices dropped by up to 15 cents a pound in some Winnipeg stores as a result of decreases in the price of live cattle.

The price drop caught many local producers off guard, Ellison said. They were anticipating some drop in prices, but hadn't expected it to be so large.

Ellison said retail prices didn't fall as much as wholesale prices. Many retailers used the occasion to increase their profit margins, he said.

Wholesale prices paid Canadian cattle raisers fell from $85 to $70 a hundredweight, but then rose last week to $76 a hundredweight, said Charles Gracey, manager of the Canadian Cattlemen's Association.

"Close up on buying hosiery."

Everybody knows fashion today is a total look. Buying the correct hosiery is as important as buying a dress. Here are some things to consider: keep stocking textures proportioned to shoe. Wear heavier stockings with lower heeled, sportier shoes; sheerer stockings as heels get higher. When you're in black, wear a sheer tint-of-black stocking. Under fabrics that tend to cling or body-conscious shapes, a seamless all-in-one panty and hose avoids noticeable panty lines. Support stockings, today, add sleekness with almost as much sheerness as regular pantyhose. The most flattering hosiery for today's fashions is Caprice textured pantyhose, the "Chic" sheers, which are now available at Eaton's.

"Dot de Paris" 12-denier sheers with flock dot pattern. Black or brown. 4.00 pr. Vertical Rib, raised pattern on sheer leg in taupe, wine or black. 3.50 pr. "French Lace" all-over sheer pattern in black, grey or wine. 3.50 pr. All are sandalfoot styles, for sizes S.M.T. Shopping Tip: best way to tell how hosiery will look on your legs, pull it over the inside of your forearm — not, as most frequently advised, over the back of your hand.

Pilot group cool to French-in-air

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The Canadian Air Line Pilots' Association (CALPA) has reacted cooly to the news that air traffic control systems in Quebec's major airports will be made completely bilingual by early next year.

Federal Transport Minister Don Mazankowski announced Tuesday a team had already been created to implement the unanimous recommendations of a commission of inquiry which urged bilingual instrument and visual flight rules rules for Quebec's main airports, including Dorval and Mirabel, by early 1980.

And CALPA president Roland Cook admitted his association has misgivings:

"We have reservations as to whether the theoretical approach of the report and simulation studies will be reflected in real world implementation."

Cook said, however, that CALPA's input and participation with the three-man commission over the past three years "have had positive effects in that any implementation is likely to be a great deal better considered than it might otherwise have been."

Mazankowski made public the royal commission report and his decision after receiving the three-member commission's findings early last week.

The swift government action represents a clear victory for francophone air traffic controllers who split with their English-speaking counterparts over the issue in 1976. The Liberal cabinet was also bitterly divided and Senator Jean Marchand, a former transport minister, resigned.

The resulting government furor was described by Pierre Trudeau, prime minister at the time, as the greatest threat to national unity since the conscription crisis.

The royal commission, made up of three judges, was named to look into the matter after a strike by pilots belonging to the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association (CALPA) paralysed Canadian airlines on the eve of the Montreal Olympics in 1976.

Then transport minister Otto Lang backed down in the face of the strike and ordered bilingual operations already under way in Quebec curtailed, pending a decision by the royal commissioners.

Spokesmen for the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association refused immediate comment and scheduled a news conference for this afternoon.

But a French-speaking pilots' group, Association des Gens de l'Air, was delighted with the course of events.

Roger Demers, the association president, told a

Program isn't so FAIR say insurance brokers

By NORMAN GIDNEY
Times Staff

The Insurance Corporation of B.C.'s FAIR auto insurance rates are unfair, spokesman for the private insurance industry said Monday after getting a look at Fundamental Auto Insurance Rating.

But members of the New Democratic Party opposition and the B.C. Automobile Association welcomed the new non-discriminatory rate system which will be phased in over the next five years.

"The poor old ladies are going to be hit worst — the ones who are cautious and don't drive sports cars," said Brian Stanhope, manager of the Insurance Bureau of Canada office in Vancouver.

"It puts the rate-making business back 40 or 50 years," said Larry Shane of Gardiner Agencies in Victoria, adding it scraps a fairly-sophisticated system of assigning risks which has grown up over the years due to public demand.

After FAIR is in place, there will be only three categories for determining the rates for accident-free drivers — whether the car is used for pleasure only, to and from work or for business purposes.

"It's going to cost us," Shane added, meaning Victorians who now have the lowest rates in the province, only 64 per cent of what Vancouverites pay at the top of the scale.

"I don't think it's going to be a very popular decision in Victoria."

BCAA president Harold Crompton said he is pleased with the new program, especially the rate reductions for young drivers.

"They now have an incentive to avoid accidents and will not be penalized merely for youthfulness. Now the costs of insurance will be placed where they should be — in the pockets of those who cause accidents."

MLA Ernie Hall, a member of the NDP government which established ICBC and a former auto insurance agent, said FAIR puts the province back to where it was at the end of 1975.

"We're seeing the end to the very high discriminatory rates that were introduced in 1976 against young people and we're seeing a continuation of the removal of territorial discrimination that started off in 1973 . . . so I welcome it from that point of view."

But he also believes FAIR could lead to tangles of litigation between drivers, since the driver blamed for an expensive accident faces an extra $300 bill on his auto insurance.

"It will be a simpler, more

Adulteress executed, murderer goes free

TEHRAN (UPI) — A revolutionary firing squad today executed a woman accused of adultery but a convicted murderer walked out of court a free man because the father of his victim forgave him.

Nargis Jabbaris was executed in the northeastern resort of Sari on the charge of adultery, Pars news agency reported. She was the 486th person executed since the Islamic regime took power in February.

The woman's accused lover, Haji Baba Sabeqi, received 100 lashes as his punishment. The news agency said the court did not sentence him to death because of his "ignorance" and because he was a bachelor.

In Shiraz, Iran's southern "City of Roses," former gendarmerie master sergeant Evaz Mehravar was freed by the judge in an emotional scene as the father of Nazer Rezazadeh forgave him for shooting his son to death, a newspaper report said today. No details of the killing were given.

Under Islamic law a criminal in not liable for punishment by authorities if pardoned by relatives of the victim, even in cases of premeditated murder.

One-man frogman campaign clicks

By PHILIP HAGER
Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — It began on the Fourth of July, when Mitch Egan, a 37-year-old restaurant consultant, strode into San Francisco International Airport and began handing out clickers — the tiny noisemakers favored by children at Halloween, birthdays and other celebrations.

Egan was declaring a small and lonely war against religious solicitors, the persistent, indefatigable salesmen for assorted causes he and other travellers encounter so often in airports.

"On my last trip to L.A., I'd been solicited three times between the plane and the car rental booth," he recalled. "I thought, 'What is this?' They say they have a right to solicit. But I say I've got a right not to be solicited. So I decided to do something about it."

What Egan did was to launch a one-man tour of big city airports, handing out clickers by the thousands in the name of the Fellowship to Resist Organized Groups Involved in Exploitation (FROGIE).

The idea, he tells often delighted travellers, is to use the clicker to ward off aggressive solicitors.

"Saying 'no' doesn't work and getting physical can get you in jail," Egan explained. "Using this clicker really works. You can't talk to somebody with a clicker going off in your face...We are going to get these people out of airports."

Egan, who lives in Burlingame, about 12 miles south of San Francisco, has enjoyed some early — if temporary — success in his battle against religious sects. His act recently enlivened by a frog costume, Egan said he has handed out 75,000 clickers he bought with his own money for about 7 cents apiece. Travel expenses have put another big dent in his wallet.

At San Francisco airport, solicitors have disappeared for the moment in the wake of the Egan frog assault. But at Denver — one of a number of stops on an itinerary that stretches from Seattle to Chicago to Fort Lauderdale to San Diego — the solicitors have returned despite Egan's temporary triumph.

"When he was here the place sounded like a swamp full of crickets," recalled Robert Stapp, public affairs manager for Denver's Stapleton International Airport.

"But now the solicitors are right back at the same old place. We can't throw 'em out. We've been to court three or four times but that doesn't work. They're a real nuisance."

"His clicking campaign is having no effect on us," said Bharata Dasa, director of public and legal affairs for the Hare Krishna sect in nearby Berkeley. "When people at airports ask us what he's doing, we just say he's 'clicking for Krishna.'"

A number of persons have sent small contributions ($5, $1, 25 cents), including one contributor who asked, should FROGIE ever issue formal memberships, that she be given the membership number of 007.

There was no sign of a letup in the clicker campaign here last week as Egan, clad in his green and gold frog costume, handed out the devices to a steady stream of children, airport employees and travellers. In the momentary quiet of the morning, the tiny noisemaker could be heard throughout the terminal — click-click, click-click, click-click.

All of this is music to the ears of the chain-smoking, New York-born Egan. During his small war, he has heard endless stories about religious solicitors — how they use flattery, deceit and intimidation against unwary travellers.

"I've heard everything, even how they will put their foot in front of a wheelchair while they try to get a donation out of somebody," Egan said.

"Well, I started this thing and I guess I'll have to finish it.

Final farewell to Dief

Times News Services

SASKATOON — His "fellow Canadians" — to use the term he used so effectively during his long political career — said a final farewell today to John George Diefenbaker, the Saskatchewan lawyer they made prime minister more than two decades ago.

Prior to his burial on the banks of the South Saskatchewan River, Diefenbaker lay in state at Convocation Hall on the University of Saskatchewan campus here, where he had acted as chancellor until his death last weeks in Ottawa.

Prominent politicians and academics, including Saskatchewan Premier Alan Blakeney and university president R. W. Begg, filed past his casket which had been carried by a hearse early in the morning from the railway station, through the city to the university. Ordinary citizens followed, many with tears in their eyes.

Meanwhile, Diefenbaker's legal representatives said they would reveal details of his will and a controversial retirement trust fund later this week. (See also story on page 19).

Diefenbaker arrived in this central Saskatchewan city late Tuesday.

His body remained on the train overnight and, as the sun rose this morning, eight red-coated Mounties lifted the casket from the train and carried it past a Canadian Armed Forces honor guard and assembled dignitaries to the hearse that would take "The Chief" for his last ride through Saskatoon.

On its arrival here, the first person to view the coffin was Gordon Churchill, of Victoria, a defence minister in Diefenbaker's last government and one of the prairie populist's closest friends.

Gold surges to $311 high

LONDON (UPI) — The price of gold shot up to record levels on the European bullion markets today, hitting more than $311 an ounce in London.

The upsurge followed the U.S. treasury gold auction Tuesday that brought bids above $300, but the foreign exchange markets were again very quiet.

Gold rose $5.375 in Zurich overnight to open at $306.375 and was up $4.025 in London at $306.650.

The rise continued in London and gold was priced at a record $311.50.

"The market is very active and we are seeing speculative demand from every quarter," said a dealer with Samuel Montagu brokers.

A Swiss dealer said, "Gold is firm after a very good auction in Washington and there are rumors that the United States is going to stop selling gold on the General Services Administration auctions."

Too wet even for ducks

RICHMOND — Rainy weather is normally considered lovely for ducks but Richmond RCMP say Tuesday night was an exception.

In a press release, the Mounties said an officer on patrol reported the rain and mist in the low-lying municipality forced him to drive with his side window open so he could see where he was going.

So bad was visibility, the officer reported, that a low-flying duck flew through the window and landed on the seat beside him.

Police said the case was quacked by shooing the duck from the patrol car.

Hydro, ferry strike threats

The possibility of a strike is dogging two major B.C. crown corporations — B.C. Hydro and the B.C. Ferry Corp.

The ferry workers cleared the way for a strike Tuesday when they served 72-hour strike notice.

However, union president Shirley Mathieson said efforts will be made at today's meeting with mediator Fred Geddes to find a way of avoiding such action.

She said any action by the 2,600 ferry workers will take the form of rotating strikes, shutting down one terminal at a time.

However, even that action could severely disrupt late summer ferry service already strained by the heavy tourist traffic and the loss two weeks ago of the Queen of Alberni.

The ferry ran aground in Active Pass and may be out for as much as two months.

Meanwhile, B.C. Hydro faces labor problems on two fronts, from 3,700 clerical, office and related employees as well as the corporation's electrical workers.

Shop stewards for the members of the Office and Technical Employees Union are to meet tonight to lay plans for what they called "selective job action."

A union spokesman said the employees won't conduct a wholesale strike because they don't want to inconvenience the public.

The union has been in a legal strike position since mediator Jack Chapelas withdrew from the contract dispute last week.

Hydro's 3,200 electrical workers have voted 93 per cent in favor of striking to back their contract demands.

However, Art O'Keeffe, business agent for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Local 258, said no action will be taken until the union meets again with Hydro.

"The resounding strike mandate answers attempts by B.C. Hydro to erode long established conditions in the agreement," O'Keeffe said.

"B.C. Hydro and union relations are at an all-time low — the worst in 75 years."

B.C. ferry officials have said a major issue delaying settlement of a new contract is the cost of sick leave. Under the old contract, employees were allowed six days of sick leave at full salary.

A management letter to employees says records indicate the number of sick days taken by employees in the eight months since the plan took effect has increased rapidly and an alternative is needed to curtail the expense.

FAIR deal called unfair

efficient and less costly plan to administer,'' said Bill Hartley, former NDP public works minister who is now in business here as an insurance man.

But he said he believes the NDP's plan several years ago to use part of the gasoline tax to pay some of ICBC's costs was fairer, since the more people drove, the more they would contribute.

"But FAIR is "a step in the right direction,'' Hartley said.

Moving to the so-called ''postage stamp rates'' across the province is only just, Hartley said.

"Why should there be differences? The liquor board provides a bottle of booze in Prince George at the same price as it does in Victoria.''

The private companies are going to find it hard to compete, Shane said, suggesting one of the side-effects of FAIR may be to eliminate the private insurers again.

"It's a possibility. In private ICBC has told them on at least one occasion they're not going to sit back and watch their business taken away,'' added Shane.

At present, the private insurers are generally confined to writing coverage for the extras not required by law, mainly physical damage and comprehensive.

Shane said one private insurance company said the non-discriminatory rates may drive it out of auto insurance entirely.

"The plan mystifies me,'' said Stanhope. ''The only thing that's bothering me is the question whether these conditions will apply to the private insurance companies as well.''

He was referring to the three-year $20 accident premium levied against motorists who make collision claims, and the $100 accident premium charged to drivers responsible for third party damage.

"I can see insurance companies being nickelled and dimed to death,'' said Stanhope of the $20 charge.

Now, a driver with $100 or $200 deductible collision coverage thinks twice about submitting a collision claim for an amount that is slightly above his deductible, because he would lose the safe driving discount and his premium would increase by more than the deductible amount.

But with FAIR, a collision claim will cost him only $20 a year more for three years. "A motorist will say 'I can afford that','' said Stanhope.

Pilots cool to Ottawa decision press conference today that English-speaking pilots and air traffic controllers who struck to oppose the use of French in Quebec air space three years ago would have a hard time doing so now.

Demers, whose group has been lobbying for bilingualism in Quebec skies, said the unanimous conclusion by the commissioners had resolved the question.

Acceptance of the report by the federal cabinet places opponents of air bilingualism in a poor position to object, he said, but it is "hard to predict'' whether there will be a backlash.

''They will need public opinion to do it and I don't think they have public opinion (with them),'' Demers said.

Demers said that since 1976 the emotionalism surrounding the issue has cooled and he thinks relations between English-and French-speaking pilots and controllers have improved.

"Slowly, gradually people have come to accept what is going on in other countries,'' he said. "They are dealing with it more rationally.

"They have realized that our arguments were well founded.''

The conclusion of the royal commission means that francophones will have greater access to jobs in the aviation industry, he said.

Demers added that the position of his his organization, which has 3,300 members, is consistent with the stance of the International Civil Aviation Organization and conforms with the Official Languages Act of Canada, as well as Quebec's Charter of the French language.

The Gens de l'Air will continue to exist, to make sure the government goes ahead with implementation of air bilingualism and it will lobby for creation of a Quebec regional carrier serving the whole province, he said.

He also said he would like to see bilingual operations at airports in Ottawa, Labrador and northern New Brunswick, but the Gens de l'Air will not actively intervene in theses cases.

If French-speaking pilots outside Quebec want to push for bilingual services, his group will give them moral support, but he doubted such services are needed in the English-speaking provinces.

The Gens de l'Air is financed by the Quebec government, which is committed to paying it $140,000 in subsidies this year.

Air Canada responded in a statement that the airline is "gratified to note that highlights in the minister's statement support Air Canada's position that the transition towards bilingual air traffic control be carried out in an orderly and monitored fashion with first consideration to technical capabilities and safety.''

Tsunami adviser has analysed Tofino tide records right back to the turn of the century and come up with what he considers a curious coincidence

Can scientists learn to predict tidal waves?

By AB KENT, Times Staff

Most people remember the 1964 seismic wave that wrecked the Port Alberni waterfront, the most stunning B.C. coast event of its kind this century.

That tsunami was touched off by an Alaskan Gulf earthquake that brought widespread destruction to communities there. Until then few people knew what a tsunami was.

But how many people know at least 33 tsunamis have occurred on the B.C. coast in the 70 years between 1906 and 1976?

Careful analysis of tide records spanning that period is part of a research study being carried out by Syd Wigen, an engineer-scientist engaged as tsunami adviser to the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay.

On the basis of what he has turned up so far it might be possible to actually prepare for tsunamis of the future.

For two years Wigen served as Canadian representative at the Pacific Tsunami Warning Centre in Hawaii, and studied in detail the 1961 Chilean and 1964 Alberni waves.

"I realized many possible tsunamis had never been investigated and no one had ever compiled a record of those that had occurred," he said.

It could be assumed most of the waves were too small to cause significant damage or occurred unnoticed on undeveloped, isolated parts of the coast.

By the time he had gone through the seismic records available to him — starting with the eruption of Krakatoa in 1883 — Wigen had isolated 1,600 earthquakes large enough to have caused a tsunami.

He turned to the Tofino tide records going back to the turn of the century, finding indications ranging from a wave only six centimetres high, up to 240 centimetres, the one that rose to 800 centimetres (about 26 feet) in the Alberni Canal 15 years ago.

A curious coincidence began to take form having regard to time, frequency and magnitude.

When he plotted the record mathematically, Wigen was surprised to find a new relationship on his graph . . . the logarithmic form had become linear.

Now he wonders whether, if carried to a logical conclusion, similar plots might enable tsunamis to be predicted.

Much research would be required to prove such a hypothesis, but Wigen is prepared to spend the time, and suggests IOS as a suitable location to base the work and build up a subject library that would be of interest to graduate students.

"What I am doing is very basic, very fundamental, but it never seems to have been done."

Prof. S.L. Soloviev, head of the Tsunami committee of the International Union of Geodesy and Geophysics, says such a study is worthwhile.

Wigen said the advantages are obvious. Aside from public safety considerations, governments, industry and insurers would welcome tsunami predictability as socially and economically useful.

For example, risk analysis and cost protection factors would be of great assistance in the planning of large coastal engineering projects such as oil terminals and superports.

It is the kind of information required to give "a proper degree of protection for the Canadian west coast and Canada's contribution to the protection of the Pacific community," Wigen said.

Canada is one of 18 Pacific rim countries including the U.S., Japan, New Zealand, Russia and Guatemala who are members of the tsunami warning system based at the International Tsunami Information Centre. In conjunction with M.G. Spaeth, tsunami warning system co-ordinator for the U.S. National Weather Service, Wigen has just completed a report on the use of satellites in the warning system.

If their report is acted upon, it would appear to be feasible to reduce tsunami verification procedure to less than one hour, allowing ample time to warn people in the projected damage zone.

The system at present relies on conventional communications to get signals from seismic and tide gauge stations, resulting in delay. Wigen and Spaeth examined the possibility of using orbiting satellites to transmit quickly a large volume of data, on demand, from perhaps 100 automated stations spotted around the Pacific.

They conclude that such a system is practicable within TWS, and if fitted to existing tidal stations with suitable mounting structures, the cost per satellite detection unit would be about $15,000.

Wigen would also like to see developed "appropriate public awareness of tsunamis," enabling people threatened by one to know what to expect or to escape injury.

For instance, people on a beach or close enough to observe a sudden drop in the water level should expect a tsunami wave to follow shortly, and ought to move at once to higher ground. A similar precaution is adviseable for anyone near the sea who feels a strong local earthquake.

Wigen said he knows of no locally-generated tsunami in the past century, and he does not know what might happen if one does occur.

"But I think people should be aware that if the sea surface is disturbed — rising and falling — to take to higher ground," he said.

Sometimes the long-range effect is the more destructive, as in the tsunami resulting from an earthquake in Chile in May 1960.

The seismic wave generated on that occasion travelled 6,600 miles across the Pacific as a speed of 442 miles an hour, reaching the east coast of Japan in 15 hours with sufficient force to fill the streets of Hilo with mud, fish, sewage, broken power lines, poles, trees and debris of all kinds.

Buildings were swept away, waterfront installations smashed and large rocks and pieces of steel-reinforced concrete were carried hundreds of feet inshore.

Businessmen rush to grab locations in re-born Crystal

Businessmen obviously feel the new Crystal Gardens will be a boom tourist attraction and a prime place to set up shop.

Sixty have applied to fill seven service outlets in the refurbished Victoria landmark.

Six applications alone were filed to operate the garden's one large restaurant.

The deadline for applications was Tuesday.

Bob Murphy of Realspan Properties said today most of the applications are of high quality.

"Quite a number of applicants confirmed their intention of doing their decor in keeping with the Victoria atmosphere and the atmosphere of the Crystal Gardens," he said. "Many of them involved local products or local art."

Murphy said there were three or four applications for quality gift shops, two or three for tourist information shops, a few fast food outlets and several import shops.

There were also applications to open ladies and mens wear shops.

Murphy says some of the proposals produced original ideas.

"I can't discuss them, however, because it would be be obvious who the applicants were," he said.

The selection process is expected to take several weeks.

The retailers are vying for position in a new centre that has such features as waterfalls, Japanese bridges, birds, rock gardens, a cocktail lounge, and a tea lounge.

Vic High, Central to share

A delay in the first major remodelling of Victoria High School since it was built 65 years ago will force a split schedule on students going back to school next month.

Dura Construction Ltd. has blamed the delay on late delivery of supplies. As the matter was beyond the control of the contractor, under the contract, no penalty will be levied.

The decision to organize a split schedule with Central was made Tuesday when Greater Victoria School District was informed that partial occupancy of Vic High would be possible by Sept. 24 at the earliest. The district knew last spring the $1.6 million project would not be completed in time, but until this week officials thought at least partial occupancy would be possible when the new term opens.

Under the split schedule, Central's shift will start at 7:45 a.m. and end at 12:15 p.m. Vic High will have the Central facilities between 1 and 5:30 p.m.

The Fairey Technical Wing at Vic High, where industrial classes are held, and the Andrews gym and change rooms are not affected by the delay and will be used in September.

Victoria: the great unknown land

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria is an unknown land in the international tourist market, the head of a Japanese tourist mission said here today.

"Everyone knows about Disneyland and San Francisco but few know about the beauty of Victoria and the Olympic Peninsula," Teruo Yonemura said in an interview.

The numbers of Japanese visitors to Victoria and nearby Washington State is increasing in percentage terms but in numbers it is still not very many, he said.

Yonemura, president of the International Businessman Club, said he is hoping to bring dramatic changes in the outward flow of Japanese tourists.

"We will be encouraging many thousands to visit your area."

In return, he is publicizing the tourist potential of the Noto Peninsula, near Tokyo. Although he works in the capital he was born on the peninsula and he considers it, too, a forgotten area as far as international travel is concerned.

"Visitors all go to the big cities, to Osaka or Tokyo. Ah, but the people of Osaka and Tokyo, they go to the Noto Peninsula for their holidays. We want Canadians and Americans to visit it, too."

He apologized for calling it a Noto-Olympic Peninsula twinning.

"Many in Japan do not know the difference between the United States and Canada. I know the difference but many do not. When they get here, they will see the difference.

"But Olympic is a good name to use because it has good associations for the Japanese people. They know of the Olympic Games."

By declaring the two areas to be twinned, there will be an escalation in tourist promotions and an exchange between the two areas.

For example, if the idea is accepted traditional Japanese dancers would come to perform in Butchart Gardens or in some theatre in Victoria, if invited.

In a similar way, Victoria performers would be invited to perform in cities in the Noto Peninsula as a cultural exchange and to help promote the tourist industry.

Yonemura and his 15-member delegation toured Washington State Tuesday and then divided in two groups. He led seven to Victoria this morning on the Coho, while the remainder continued to travel to various towns in Washington.

"We found Washington people friendly but more interested in industry than in tourists. They have not yet realized the potential. They seem to be more interested in planes and farming and lumber. I think they will also see the importance of the tourist industry."

Victoria appeared to realize the importance of tourism but more could be done in terms of getting the message to overseas countries.

Yonemura, 38, is employed as a cultural adviser by the giant international companies based in Tokyo.

But he was born in Noto Peninsula and on a recent visit home he noticed the lack of international tourists there.

"I got the idea of becoming a sister to the Olympic Peninsula and everyone seeks to be excited about the idea. The Noto Peninsula is preparing to welcome Canadian and American visitors."

There are 500,000 people living on the peninsula, which is across-island from Tokyo. It attracts 3 million visitors a year, almost all of them Japanese.

Meanwhile, the major Japanese cities are jammed with overseas tourists.

It should be easy to promote Washington State and Victoria in Japan, he said because it is one hour closer to Japan than San Francisco.

"It is the closest place to Japan. We should visit it first."

Police officials awarded pay hike

Senior city police officers will get a 14.7 per cent pay hike as a result of police board approval Tuesday of a contract which grants Victoria police union members parity with their Vancouver counterparts.

The seven inspectors involved will now get an annual salary of $35,400, retroactive to July 1.

The board approved the pay hike for the senior policemen as it ratified the union agreement for 132 members of the force.

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts today at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 1,200 head.

A1-2 slaughter steers gained $1.50 from a moderate local demand. A1-2 slaughter heifers met a strong local demand at prices $2 higher with sales to 75.50.

Today's Markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market rose sharply in active mid-afternoon trading. Thirteen of the 14 stock groups advanced, led by golds. Consumer products declined.

Advances outnumbered declines 221 to 181 with 225 issues unchanged. Trading resumed shortly after 11:30 a.m. EDT in shares of Consumers Distributing Co. Ltd. and Revelstoke Cos. Ltd. following halts on Tuesday. The companies said they are considering a merger. Consumers Distributing had risen ⅝ to $15⅝ and Revelstoke ⅞ to $11⅜ by 2 p.m.

Vancouver

Prices were mixed in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

In the industrials, B.C. Resources Investment Corp. was unchanged at $6.05 on 6,405 shares, Pagurian Corp. was unchanged at $4.25 on 500 and Bell Canada was unchanged at $21⅜ on 25.

On the resource and development board, Amber Resources was up .08 at $2.23 on 46,200 shares and SNA Resources was up .02 at .51 on 39,000 shares. Iona Silver Mines was up .06 at $1.79 on 22,300 shares and Azure Resources was down .04 at $1 on 18,625.

On the curb exchange, Trans-Pac Ventures was unchanged at $1.15 on 5,000 shares and Val Dor Exploration was unchanged at $1.15 on 2,500. Lincoln Resources was up .06 at $2.30 on 2,000 shares and Ruskin Development was unchanged at .52 on 2,000.

New York

The New York stock market held steady today, with slightly more gainers than losers among issues listed on the exchange. Stock market analysts said investors were receiving conflicting signals. Indications that higher interest rates lie ahead would normally push prices down, as would the hefty jump in London gold prices. But the possibility remains that a sustained rising market is ahead if tight monetary policy makes headway against inflation.

London

The London stock market rose moderately near the close of trading today. The Financial Times index of 30 industrials closed at 465.7, up 1.2. Most stocks were little changed but golds advanced. Canadian shares were mixed.

Consumers, Revelstoke talk merger

TORONTO (CP) — Consumers Distributing Co. Ltd. of Toronto has announced negotiations are under way for a possible merger with Revelstoke Companies Ltd. of Calgary.

Consumers, a major Canadian retail chain, said a further announcement will be made "as soon as it is possible to do so."

The company operates about 160 catalogue showrooms in nine provinces and recently purchased the 70-store chain of May Department Stores Co. of St. Louis, Mo.

Revelstoke operates 107 retail lumber stores in Western Canada, including one in Victoria, and is also in the concrete business.
